The Political Pot

An advance poll for the June 9 election will be held in Victoria June 4, 5 and 6.

Persons who will be unable to vote on election day can make use of advance poll facilities which are expected to be situated, as usual, in the YMCA.

Women have a difficult time in B.C. politics. Of 83 who have tried to get elected since 1918, only seven have been successful.

Here's a warning to potential candidates:

Your name must be on the voters' list. Under the Elections Act, a person is entitled to be nominated only if he is a qualified voter.

This regulation disqualified one candidate last year.

With politics so much in the news since the 1952 election, observers are looking for an upswing in voting June 9.

Last year, 68.53 per cent of the persons eligible to vote went to the polls—543,456 out of 793,073 eligible.

Every effort will be made to see that BCN sailors on training cruises near B.C. are given a chance to vote.

Last year, election officials arranged for ships to rendezvous at a designated spot so election machinery could be put aboard.

Premier Bennett will meet this afternoon with B.C. Social Credit League executive members to discuss election strategy.

Just back from the interior, the premier is optimistic about his party's chances in the June 9 election.

"People appreciate what we did during our eight months in office. They want to give us a chance to see what we can do in a full term. Also, they know the Socialists are the only ones with a chance to form a government with a majority," Premier Bennett said.

Frank Calder, 27-year-old native Indian who has been a member of the last two legislatures, will be out to retain his Atlin seat. He received CCF nomination for the district Friday. Also nominated to run again was George Hills, CCF, Prince Rupert.

Married Men in Armed Forces Get Pay Boost

OTTAWA (CP)—The 48,000 married men in Canada's armed forces will get bigger subsistence or ration allowances, effective May 1.

Some 33,000 married men living off-station will get increased subsistence allowances ranging from $16 to $30 a month. The remaining 15,000 living on-station will get a $10-a-month increase in ration allowance.

Defense Minister Claxton, after announcing the boosts in the Commons Friday night, told a reporter the increase will cost the government about $10,000,000.

The new subsistence allowance for other ranks who are married will be $91 a month, an increase of $30 a month for

Rare Unanimity In UN for Peace On Korean Front

PW Exchange Starts At 4 p.m. Sunday

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—In a rare unanimous vote, the UN General Assembly today expressed hope that the proposed talks at Panmunjom will result in an early armistice in Korea.

Friction on another controversial issue was avoided when the assembly decided to postpone action on a controversial measure calling for an impartial inquiry into Communist charges that the UN has used germ warfare in Korea.

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—The Communists said today they would be prepared Sunday to discuss a date for resuming Korean armistice talks which ended in a deadlock last Oct. 2. Their announcement came shortly after homeward-bound Chinese war prisoners ended a 48-hour "hunger strike" at Pusan, the second demonstration by the hard-core Reds since Wednesday.

The Communists also proposed releasing the first group of 25 Allied prisoners at 9 a.m. Monday (4 p.m. PST Sunday), and another group of 25 half an hour later.

They said they wished to continue the release of prisoners in batches of 25. Allied staff officers said the timetable "appeared reasonable" but they wanted to study it.

Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, chief United Nations truce negotiator, arrived at the Allied truce base of Munsan near here to observe the exchange and wait for the signal to resume talks on ending the war.

4 Red POWs Killed By Allied Guards

PUSAN, Korea (AP)—Allied guards armed with shotguns killed four Communist prisoners and wounded 45 in putting down a bloody riot by chanting, rock-throwing captives in Yoncho Island Friday afternoon, the United Nations prisoner of war command announced.

No UN security personnel were seriously hurt. Yoncho is near Koje Island off the tip of South Korea.

Oak Bay Robbery Loot $3,600; License Plates Were Stolen

License plates (U4-435) on the get-away car in the Oak Bay bank hold-up Friday were stolen from Clarke's Auto Parts and Service garage at 3301 Douglas, police reported today. Owners of the garage said they did not know when the plates were stolen.

A man was being questioned by Oak Bay police today on suspicion he may have taken part in Friday's daylight armed hold-up of the Canadian Bank of Commerce branch in Oak Bay.

Police did not divulge his identity but said he was picked up in an overnight check of suspicious characters.

Meanwhile, despite the most extensive police dragnet ever laid down on southern Vancouver Island, the sedan which three armed men used for their getaway had apparently vanished into thin air.

It was either an Oldsmobile Rocket or a Chevrolet, according to eye-witnesses.

Loft taken by the men—one carrying a Sten gun, the other two revolvers—was disclosed today as $3,600, not $2,000 as first reported. Most of it was in United States currency.

While the search was pressed all over the Island, Oak Bay police discounted reports that the bank robbers may have stolen a launch and fled to the United States.

The suspect taken in for questioning will be put in a line-up for possible identification by the three staff members of the bank who were forced to lie on the floor during the hold-up.

He is not under arrest.

Search Cordova Bay Area

The main search during the night was concentrated in the Cordova Bay and Gordon Head areas after Gavin Jack, who lives at the intersection of Blenkinsop and Marine Drive, reported seeing three men in bushes there at about 6:30 p.m.

Police of Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich, Esquimalt, and the RCMP joined forces to scour the area all through the night without success.

Road blocks and patrols on the beach, designed to cover every method of escape, failed to turn up a sign of the three men.

Mr. Jack told police: "I was walking through the bush from my son's house when I saw three men in dungarees ahead of me. One of them had a bulge under one arm," Mr. Jack said.

"They moved out of the bush very fast and first turned toward Mount Douglas Park. Then they walked down Marine Drive into the bush again."

Chief Constable John Blackstock and Deputy Chief Harry Mercer of the city force helped direct the search.

Constables on foot prowled every trail in the country and redoubled their efforts at first light today.

Only clue found in the overnight search was a set of footprints on the beach at Cordova Bay, heading toward Ten Mile Point.

Hold-Up Was Carefully Timed

The carefully-timed robbery took place at about 1:15 p.m. Friday. Witnesses said a light green car drove into a vacant bus zone outside the bank door and three men got out, leaving the car door open and the engine running.

They were wearing dark clothing and had stockings pulled over their heads as masks. One carried a Sten gun, the others revolvers.

The gunmen ordered four people in the bank to "get down on the floor." They were K. W. Brown, manager; Arnold Petersen, 329 Island Road, teller, and Ricki Syrett, 2885 Austin, bookkeeper-stenographer, and C. A. Bovey, 2310 Oak Bay Avenue, a customer.

One man emptied a cash drawer while the others tried to open a safe in the vault. After about 90 seconds one of them said, "Okay, let's go."

They ran from the bank to their car, drove the few feet to the corner of Monterey and Oak Bay Avenue, then whizzed south on Monterey to Windsor. From that point their trail was lost.

Const. Charles Bates of the Oak Bay force came close to colliding with the speeding car as it rounded the corner.

Aug. 10 Likely Date For Federal Election

By VICTOR J. MACKIE, Times Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—August 10 is increasingly singled out in parliamentary circles here as the date on which the federal government will go to the country.

Members who favored an early spring election and were disappointed have now swung their weight to the August 10 date. They visualize the pre-election pattern taking the following shape:

June 11—Dissolution of parliament. June 22 commencement of enumeration of the voters' list, to be completed in six days as required by Election Act. August 10, voting day. October 10, return of the writs for the election constituting official certification of the 265 members elected for the new parliament.

The government must be aware of the difficulties involved in completing a reasonably accurate enumeration of the voters for the voters' lists in either July or August, both holiday months. A delay of enumeration beyond July 1 or to put it off altogether until the fall, after Labor Day, would preclude the voting day being fixed much before Nov. 16. This date most members are agreed would be too late for a general election. Hence the growing conviction in the capital here that Aug. 10 will be the date for the federal ballot battle.

Hutchison's Times Editorials Given Top Award for Canada

Bruce Hutchison, editor of The Victoria Daily Times, has won the National Newspaper Award for the best Canadian editorials of 1952.

The honor, which has come to western Canada for the first time in the five-year history of the Toronto Men's Press Club awards, carries with it a $400 cash prize and a certificate.

Announcement was made Friday afternoon by Norman Johnston, president of the Toronto club.

The competition is open to the 95 daily newspapers published in this country.

The Times entered seven of Hutchison's editorials, covering three main topics:

(1) The famous March 7 editorial, "How to Kill Hospital Insurance," which precipitated a B.C. legislature demand that the Times be called before the bar of the House to make a public apology. (The Times ran the editorial a second time to make sure that none of its readers missed the controversial piece.)

(2) An editorial of July 16, 1952, arguing that the Chief Justice should not be asked to intervene in labor disputes, on the grounds that "The courts are not to be involved in any fashion with the making of the law or its administration. They must only interpret the law."

(3) The front-page editorial of June 17, 1952, entitled "The Crisis and the Constitution," concerning the dispute arising out of last June's election and arguing: "Whatever happens to political parties and politicians, the Queen's writ must always run."

Here is a complete list of the awards:

Editorial writing: Bruce Hutchison, Victoria Times.

Spot news reporting: Don DeLaplante, Toronto Globe and Mail.

Feature writing: Wilfred List, Toronto Globe and Mail.

Staff corresponding: William Stevenson, Toronto Daily Star.

Feature news photography: Harry Befus, Calgary Herald.

Cartooning: Robert LaPalme, Montreal Le Devoir.

Citations:

T. E. Nichols, Hamilton Spectator, for staff corresponding.

Robert W. Chambers, Halifax Chronicle-Herald, for cartooning.

The awards will be presented at a dinner in Toronto, May 8, given by Toronto Men's Press Club.

Editor Hutchison and his wife are currently touring Europe. He is sending editorials and columns back to the Times and a dozen other Canadian papers, on a special syndication arrangement.

On June 2, Hutchison will cover the Coronation exclusively for the Times.

In a letter to the Times staff received yesterday, from the French Riviera, Hutchison wrote:

"In this lotus land of flowers and decadence nothing seems to matter but the next meal, which will be wonderful, expensive and inadequate."

"As to wine, we use it to clean the windshield, and I am drinking Vichy water to keep my stomach in order."

"Well, I must take some pictures of this indescribable beauty, which is almost as good as Victoria. Love to you all. I am most eager for our reunion on the good old paper."

ONE WOMAN'S DAY

By NANCY HODGES

"CALL ME MADAM"

IT ISN'T OFTEN I have time to attend the movies but I did find time to see "Call Me Madam," the sparkling comedy of United States politics and career diplomacy which has been entertaining many local fans during the last few weeks.

It is one of the most amusing and entertaining screen productions that Hollywood has sent here for some time, with that brilliant comedienne Ethel Merman giving an inimitable and hilariously funny portrayal of the party-giving ambassador, addicted to undiplomatic—but very human—"faux pas" and to frequent long-distance calls to "Harry" in Washington, D.C. And, of course, the background of Irving Berlin music, to say nothing of gorgeous settings and scenes; adds color to a piquant production.

INSPIRED COMEDY

My own enjoyment of "Call Me Madam" was, if anything, spiced by the knowledge that its theme had its basis in fact, up to a point, that is. For the comedy frankly "spoofs" the career of Mrs. Perle Mesta, who made political history in the United States—and elsewhere, for that matter—when she was appointed Minister to Luxembourg in the early summer of 1949.

But when President Truman took that step, Mrs. Mesta had already had a headline-making career, although not in the realm of diplomacy—in the political sense.

PRIME PARTY-GIVER

In the U.S. capital she had already achieved fame both as an indefatigable campaign worker for the Democratic party and also as an indefatigable party-giver. A wealthy woman, Mrs. Mesta became known as a hostess who entertained on an unprecedented scale of lavish hospitality. And her clothes rated the headlines just about as often as her parties.

Her appointment to the Luxembourg embassy naturally created quite a furore. "And the stories that came back of her breezy, informality and alleged disdain of the usual sticky subservience to precedent and protocol—those two main arteries of diplomatic life—intrigued millions of her countrymen and inspired the Broadway stage and screen skit, "Call Me Madam."

LEAVES HER POST

And this week, Mrs. Mesta's career as a U.S. Minister to Luxembourg ended. Along with other Truman diplomatic appointees, she submitted her resignation before the inauguration of President Eisenhower. There had been some speculation, however, that she might continue in the post since General Eisenhower and his wife visited her frequently while he was NATO commander in Europe.

But it evidently was not to be. For on April 13 she left that little duchy, which is tucked away between Germany, Belgium and France, for London, where she has an apartment and where she will remain for the Coronation. After that she will travel for some time in Europe and the Near East, returning to Washington in the fall.

ATTAINED FAME

Mrs. Mesta was pointed out to me the last time I was in Washington a few years ago, but beyond that I know little of her except—as Will Rogers used to say—"what I read in the papers."

But whatever her political enemies may say of her shortcomings as a career diplomat—and after seeing "Call Me Madam" I am wondering if they really were shortcomings, after all—no one can gainsay her ability to make headlines for her parties, whether those parties were political or private ones.

And the mere fact of having inspired a Broadway stage and screen hit may ensure her a more lasting niche in the hall of American fame than would perhaps have been accorded her had she possessed the qualifications expected of more orthodox candidates for diplomatic posts.

THE OVATION DROWNED THE MUSIC

6,000 Applaud Goodman's Return to Carnegie Hall

NEW YORK (UP)—Benny Goodman and his famed swing band of the 1930's scorched Carnegie Hall in a comeback concert that kept 6,000 happy fans shouting and stomping into the early morning hours today.

The 43-year-old King of Swing led 14 old-time henchmen through two full programs of the tunes that made swing a national craze in the years before the Second World War.

The concert was the kick-off of a national tour Goodman and his re-formed band will make this month and next.

Carnegie Hall's 2,800 seats were filled for both programs—one starting at 8.30 p.m. and the other at midnight. Stands lined the aisles. Ticket scalpers jostled customers outside offering steep prices for seats.

When the band "jumped off" with their famous arrangement of "Bugle Call Rag," there was an uproar that drowned out the music.

But the biggest ovation of the night came with "Sing, Sing, Sing"—a wild 20-minute ride paced by Goodman's clarinet, Gene Krupa's drums and Charlie Shaver's trumpet.

Lumber Firm Wants City Waterfront Lots at $12,000

Sale of three waterfront lots on Pleasant Street to Moore-Whittington Lumber Co. Ltd. for the sum of $12,000 will be recommended to City Council April 23, lands committee agreed Friday.

Two bids received in reply to the city's advertisement of the property were not opened.

Ald. Percy Scourrah said it would be unethical to do anything but sell the lots to Moore-Whittington, since the city offered the lots at a price and the company accepted.

The last lands committee meeting authorized a letter to the lumber firm stating what the city would accept. After the letter was sent authority was given the lands committee to call for tenders. In the meantime the city's offer to Moore-Whittington was made public.

2nd Japanese Election in 7 Months Sunday

Vote Expected to Draw 35,000,000

TOKYO (AP)—Japan holds its second national election in seven months Sunday. Some 35,000,000 voters are expected to cast ballots which will decide the political future of Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida and show whether Japan's small but vocal Communist Party can stage a comeback.

Although important issues are at stake the campaign has failed to spark public enthusiasm. No more than 70 per cent of Japan's 48,000,000 voters are expected to turn out. This would be a sizeable drop from the 76 per cent who balloted last October.

All 466 seats in Japan's powerful House of Representatives will be filled. And the new national government will be formed on the basis of party representation in the House.

Little Yoshida, battling for his political life, dissolved the lower House and called the elections after the body passed a motion of non-confidence against him.

Members of his own political party bolted to allow the motion to pass. Rather than resign, Yoshida took his case to the people.

A total of 1,035 candidates—including 88 Communists—are running for the 466 seats. From two to five candidates will be elected from each of 117 election districts throughout Japan.

The Reds have made a lot of noise in the campaign, but little apparent headway. Few observers give them a chance to land more than two or three candidates.

Civil Defense Seeks Key Man For Planning

A new office has been set up by the Greater Victoria Civil Defense Control Board. The board will advertise for someone to prepare emergency police plans and train auxiliaries.

Roger Peachey, former B.C. provincial police commissioner, had been recommended for the post by police chiefs within the CD framework. They find they have not the time needed to do this work.

Mr. Peachey's appointment was blocked by a motion of Roy Wooten and George Austin of Saanich council who suggested that the position should be advertised. This course was settled on.

Board authorized purchase of three low-frequency fire truck radios, one each for Esquimalt, Langford and Victoria. Also authorized was payment of $1,800 for six recently arrived air-raid sirens. Provincial and Dominion governments will each assume one-third of the cost.

A fire-truck and a three-ton heavy equipment vehicle are at present in transit from Ottawa to be disclosed and covers for defense workers here will be requested.

Prince Akihito Sees Famed Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (UP)—Hundreds of tourists jammed this honeymoon capital of the world today to welcome the bachelor Crown Prince Akihito of Japan.

The 19-year-old prince and his party journeyed here aboard a special train from Toronto following a whirlwind tour of the Queen City and Hamilton.

It shaped up as another busy day for the prince who will be the first member of the Japanese royal household to view the famous falls.

2,200 Marines Face Huge Atomic Blast

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Twenty-two hundred U.S. marines crouching in trenches today witnessed the most spectacular atomic blast of the spring series—a shot that flashed blinding white then turned a beautiful rosy orange during an unusually long-lingering afterglow.

The pre-dawn detonation, first to involve marines manoeuvring in helicopters, was set off from a 300-foot tower. After the explosion the ground troops scrambled up and advanced in a tactical exercise toward a mock enemy. Their trenches were 4,000 yards from ground zero.

Leap-frogging over them came 200 more marines in 40 Sikorsky helicopters applying vertical envelopment tactics, similar to those carried out in the Second World War by gliders and paratroops.

Six marines and six soldiers rode out the blast in trenches well in advance of the main body of troops. Authorities would not disclose their distance from the blast.

The exercise commander, Brig.-Gen. William Bullock, said there were no casualties.

The brilliant flash was seen in Los Angeles, 250 miles away, as an orange-yellow glow illuminating the entire sky.

The area was regarded as the Nairobi headquarters of the terror organization. In less than 36 hours, many of the tight-packed mud and corrugated iron dwellings of 7,000 Africans will be destroyed by torch and bulldozer.

By foot and by truck they left their shanties in the river valley on the northeast outskirts of Nairobi for Kikuyu reserves.

Thousands of African families, driving goats, chickens and livestock ahead of them, trekked north Friday night after being evicted from two shanty villages known to be hotbeds of the anti-white Mau Mau cult.

By foot and by truck they left their shanties in the river valley on the northeast outskirts of Nairobi for Kikuyu reserves.

UN Artillery Annihilates 1,000 Reds

SEOUL, Korea (UP)—Allied artillery almost annihilated an estimated 1,000 Chinese in fantrymen today as they massed for counterattacks against Pork Chop Hill.

The big guns, firing in the light of giant searchlights sweeping No-Man's-Land, ripped into a large force of Reds estimated at battalion strength and two reinforced companies.

The curtain of fire trapped the three Chinese forces, preventing the reinforcements from swarming up the slopes of Pork Chop Hill, where hand-to-hand fighting raged in Seventh Infantry Division trenches.

Division officers estimated more than 1,000 Chinese have been killed or wounded in two days of fighting for the Chorwon Valley defense line blocking the northern invasion route to Seoul.

Attacks against Pork Chop, White Horse Mountain, Jackson Heights and three outposts cost the Chinese an estimated 543 dead and wounded Friday.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By DAVE STOCK and IRVING STRICKLAND

What do you think should be done with the trouble-making Doukhobors in the Kootenays?

Gordon Winter, salesman, Victoria Tire Ltd., 2901 Admirals Road—"I think the authorities are doing the best thing possible by trying to arrange to have them sent to Costa Rica. If they can't send them to Russia, I suppose that's probably the next best place for them."

Albert Bales, truck driver, Evans, Coleman & Johnson Bros., 652 Judah Street—"Apparently they don't want to be with other people. I don't know if they would get along better if they were put some place where they would be strictly alone. Perhaps if they were apart from other people, in a good farming area, they could produce something worth while through working the land. It's certainly costing the government a lot of money to keep them where they are."

Herb Sinnott, warehouseman, Pacific Meat, 559 Paradise Street—"We would be money in pocket if we paid their fare and shipped them out of the country. We've spent all kinds of money sending extra police into their district and paying to keep them in jail. We can't afford to let them go on as they've been doing."

Eric Baker, proprietor, B & M Woodcraft, 940 Dellwood Road—"I think it would be a good thing to get them out of the country. I have not any sympathy for them. Putting them in jail for their acts of violence appears to do no good. That just makes martyrs of them. I think they should be put on an island somewhere by themselves. Then they wouldn't be bothering other people."

P. W. Tooby, ice man, B. Wilson Co., Ltd., 106 Ebert Street—"My idea is to ship them back to Russia where they belong. They're just a nuisance here. I can't go along with the things they do. If Russia won't take them back, then we should try and find some other country that will take them. We'll just have trouble as long as they stay here."

West Coast Centre Of Communists Says Official

VANCOUVER (CP)—Gordon Cushing, national secretary of the Trades and Labor Congress, said here Friday the Pacific Coast has a greater number of Communists in the labor movement than any other section of Canada.

He said in an interview that the bulk of the Communists in the labor movement have drifted to this coast.

"They came here by direction, there's no doubt about that," he added.

He didn't consider them a serious threat, but said he was sure they did not come here by accident.

Bloody Noses Promised By Malan Backer

S.A. Nationalism Plan 'Must Advance'

PRETORIA (CP)—J. G. Strydom, the "strong man" of the re-elected South African Nationalist government, told cheering university students here Friday that opposition forces will get "bloody noses" if they try to oppose Afrikaner nationalism.

The students, hundreds strong, paraded the downtown streets of this capital, singing Boer marching songs, and waving flags of the 19th-century South African Republic which fought the British in the Boer War.

Strydom, lands minister in Prime Minister Daniel Malan's government, was applauded when he said South Africa's future must be based on a Nationalist foundation.

The students' victory parade came after final official general election returns showed the Malan government, with 94 seats in a 159-member house, had won a majority of 29 over all opposition groups in the new parliament.

Popular vote figures showed the opposition about 130,000 votes ahead of the Nationalists' 600,000 votes.

Pakistan Premier Claims Removal Was Unjustified

NEW DELHI (AP)—Khawaja Nazimuddin today was quoted in reports from Karachi, capital of Pakistan, as saying his removal from the office of prime minister Friday was "illegal and unjustified."

"I will never resign," these reports quoted him as saying. The rotund, 58-year-old political leader contended that by law he was still prime minister of the Moslem nation, though admitting he no longer was in fact actually head of the government.

Governor-General Ghulam Mohammed announced Friday that he had dismissed the 18-month-old cabinet of Nazimuddin because of its inability to deal with a host of pressing problems, including a threatened famine and maintenance of law and order.

Mohammed Ali, who returned to Pakistan this week from his post as ambassador to Washington, already has formed a new government and it was sworn in Friday night by the governor-general.

Gaglardi in Defense Of Socreds' Regime

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—Works Minister P. A. Gaglardi opened his election campaign here Thursday night with a spirited defense of the Social Credit government.

British Columbia, he told an audience of 100 is on the road to "financial recovery" under the "pay-as-you-go" policy established by Finance Minister Einar Gunderson "as far as humanly possible."

He dealt with the last session of the legislature and events leading to the defeat of the Social Credit administration on the Rolston bill for education financing.

"The Rolston formula means that the government of this province would pay just under 70 per cent of the full cost of education."

Both Education Minister Rolston and Premier Bennett realized that the people of B.C. had been crying for relief.

Mrs. Rolston, he added, admitted that her plan was not a cure-all, but a step in the right direction.

He praised the work of Finance Minister Gunderson, calling him one of the "most orthodox financiers in Canada."

He denied that the opposition parties had forced the government to implement some 52 bills after its defeat on the floor of the House.

Premier Bennett and most of his cabinet colleagues sat up most of the night after the government's defeat studying what bills should be put through. The opposition parties had been called to the premier's office the next morning for the purpose of getting approval, he said.

Abolition of Capital Punishment Studied

Garson Tells House Government Is Prepared To Set Up Royal Commission To Probe Matter

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Garson indicated Friday that the government is prepared to set up a royal commission or parliamentary committee to study possible abolition of capital punishment in Canada.

As a result, Ross Thatcher (CCF, Moose Jaw), withdrew his private bill in the Commons seeking abolition of the death penalty for murder.

A number of members spoke for and against abolition of capital punishment. Angus MacInnis, CCF, Vancouver-East, said he opposes the death penalty and termed hanging brutal. J. J. Smith, L. Moose U. Mountain, thought the electric chair more humanitarian.

A bill paving the way for the establishment of national credit unions was given approval in principle.

Only objection to second reading of the measure came from some Progressive Conservative members who argued the bill—received by the members only this morning—should have had more study before being sent to a committee.

Finance Minister Abbott pressed for immediate second reading before his departure Saturday for a NATO meeting in Paris.

The legislation will permit establishment of credit unions—which lend money to their co-operative members—on a national basis. At present, they operate within provincial boundaries.

Do They Mean Social Credit?

HAVING NOTED WITH LITTLE sympathy the bruises suffered by late-comers who clambered aboard the Social Credit bandwagon and have been pushed from preferred positions by nomination meetings in the city and Saanich, observers are now drawing more serious conclusions from the scrambles and tumbles that have occurred.

The nominations indicate Social Credit units are more interested in selecting bona fide Social Crediters than "popularity" candidates for the two ridings. What justification there may be for the suggestion that Premier Bennett had favored some of the men not chosen remains speculative at this time.

The impression persists, however, that his blessings had been bestowed on "name" personalities whose reputations in public life might attract sufficient support to win seats. In Victoria no newcomers were drafted. The nominations were given to two candidates who had been defeated in the last provincial election and to one other individual whose associations with the movement were not of immediate, pre-election inspiration. A similar course was followed in Saanich.

The results suggest two developments, one speculative, the other more positive. On the assumption that Mr. Bennett wanted "popularity" candidates—an assumption that is not documented but widely held—the riding groups apparently differ with the views of their leader. If that conclusion is correct—and again be it noted no formal statement has been made of Mr. Bennett's preferences—this could be the beginnings of an important division within the movement, a withdrawal from the familiar technique of placing first importance on the question of being elected, secondary consideration only on Social Credit principles. That could amount to a revolt against Bennettism.

From this arises the more positive sequel. If candidates named in Victoria reflect the attitude of the party throughout the province, and if they should be endorsed in sufficient numbers to give Social Credit a workable government, that government could be legitimately expected to push Social Credit theory into practice—something which the last government did not attempt.

As Mr. Bennett led his group in the last legislature, Social Credit policy and doctrine were effectively concealed. A studied effort appeared to have been made to create the impression that his administration stood solely for "good government" without deviation into the unorthodox practices inherent in genuine Social Credit.

How long could that appearance be maintained if the regular, veteran Social Crediters, more concerned with Social Credit than Mr. Bennett's techniques, came to power? And what would that mean to the economy, to investment capital and to the social structure of British Columbia?

There were, of course real Social Crediters in the last administration as well as fugitives from old line parties. With few, and notable, exceptions they did not seize the opportunity to press their doctrines. Should a Social Credit government with a clear majority attain power, what grounds would exist to guarantee moderation and reasonable restraint in its operations?

These are matters that deserve serious thought following recent nominations. There was more to those nominations than the somewhat hilarious spectacle of so-called "Johnny-come-latelys" tumbling over the bandwagon tailboard.

A Brighter Look in the Budget

THE BUTLER BUDGET, ANNOUNCED this week in London, appears to be the most optimistic economic report to come out of Britain since the end of the war.

The budget, which estimates a surplus of $781 millions, lowers taxes in a number of categories—the first such relief for several years. Income taxes are reduced by sixpence in the pound, purchase taxes—which range from 33½ per cent to 100 per cent—are decreased by one-quarter, and the crippling levy of 30 per cent on all profits over a certain total will be removed effective next January 1.

Back of these reductions, which should give the British taxpayer a needed easing of his burden and thereby stimulate production, lies a much more favorable economic picture than has been possible in recent years.

A key feature of this happier outlook is the course of British overseas trade. In 1951 Britain had a trade deficit with the rest of the world amounting to more than $1.1 billion. In 1952, Mr. Butler reveals, this was changed to a trade surplus of more than $800 millions. That means that in total Britain is exporting more goods and services than she imported; she is living within her means.

The picture, of course, is somewhat more complicated than that. As Mr. Butler pointed out, "we must not forget that last year we were helped by U.S. defense aid. We received $120 millions ($336 millions) and we are very grateful for it."

Statistics on gold and dollar reserves of the sterling bloc also tell a promising story. At the end of last March, the reserves stood at $2.1 billion, which was nearly half a billion more than they had been the year before. The steady dwindling of reserves that marked the postwar years appears to have been arrested. "This is an achievement of which Britain can be proud," Mr. Butler observed.

The austerity living of the British citizen apparently is paying off, even to the extent of a removal of sugar rationing. The effort is far from over, but the progress, reflected in the latest budget by the Churchill government, is most encouraging.

Settling a Difference

THE CITY COUNCIL HAS NOW given approval, in by-law form, to the transfer of funds from the school board's Central Junior High account to meet the bill due on Oak Bay Junior High. By that action the mayor and aldermen have permitted correction of an error in procedure made by the trustees. Another source of disharmony between the council and the board has been removed.

The city has been wise in following the course taken this week. Prolongation of the dispute that hinged only on a legal technicality would have served no purpose and could have been expensive.

The council is to be commended for this latest show of co-operation and the school board will no doubt benefit by avoiding in future the minor mistake it apparently made.

WANTS MORE BUSES

May I be allowed to state a few things that are in the minds of many people, especially the old age pensioners, regarding the bus system.

Why cannot we have buses up Rockland Ave? It is a long way for some people and we don't all have cars. Quite a few of our friends cannot visit us in this private hospital because they cannot walk the distance.

Since the bus fares have been raised the pensioners find it difficult to pay the fares. In England I hear they are allowing pensioners free bus rides from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. That is a great help.

I think something ought to be done about it, perhaps if it is put before the mayor and aldermen they might help the cause.

Perhaps a few buses might be allowed that would not annoy the residents, and it would be such a help to so many.

"A LOVER OF FAIR PLAY."

DELEGATE EXPLAINS

Your paper, in the mind of the writer, has improved 100 per cent since the transfer. Undoubtedly the administration and organization are responsible for its better reading qualities. It is now a very well published and suffers little sickness. However, I cannot accept, with keen enthusiasm, the slight blunder made when reporting the procedure of the meeting for the purpose of nominating the candidates for the Social Credit League in the Crystal Gardens on April 11.

I went on the platform to speak on behalf of Percy Wright but the chairman, Mr. Hawkins, informed me that it was too late and I bowed to his decision. It would have been an honor to have nominated and to have spoken on behalf of Alderman Brent Murdoch. However, the chairman would not allow his name to go forward for nomination.

I went to the meeting as a delegate with an open mind for a purpose and that purpose was successful.

A. H. BISHOP.

From the Courtenay-Cornox Argus

SPRING is not only the season of regeneration of the earth but the time when Big Business and Big Union sit down to commence the dreary round of discussion about the year's labor contracts.

Absent from these horse-trading sessions is one disregarded figure, the man or woman who does all the paying of taxes and the buying of goods. Absorbed in their greed for their own advantage the two parties do not think of him at all; and yet his should be the influential factor in all these sessions.

If he had sat in on the IWA and carpenters' bargaining committees and the contractors and boss loggers' policy boards would the two disastrous strikes have occurred last year? We think not. Back in 1918 the late Mr. Mackenzie King wrote a remarkable book called "Industry and Humanity." In it he forecast nearly all the new features of the Welfare State as we now have in Canada—family allowances, old age pensions, mothers' pensions, widows' pensions and the rest, but the kernel of his book was the reconciling of the interests of capital and labor, which could come about only when both the parties saw them as being not "opposed" but "common."

Since then we have gone a long way in establishing the Welfare State; hardly progressed at all in bettering industrial relations. Maybe because we have shut the little man, who suffers most from the greed of labor and management, completely out of the control of business. Mr. King said that labor had a stake in the industry because it contributed its work and therefore should have a voice in management, but there should be a third party to sit in—the community—on all boards of directors.

Something has to be done. Every year more and more small firms, the very marrow and backbone of democracy, are ground to powder between the millstones of Big Business and Big Union. In a few years the two mammoths will stand face to face and then will come the struggle that may very well destroy western democracy just as Lenin foresaw and hoped it would.

Incredible Mechanism of the Fish Embryo

Readies Young Kisutch for the Next Stage

By DR. G. CLIFFORD CARL, Director, Provincial Museum

AS the time for hatching approached, Kisutch, the young salmon still in the egg, acquired more fish-like characters in preparation for the life to come. More flecks of pigment, yellow and black, appeared along the back and upper sides of the fishlet's body.

Each speck of color was confined to an irregularly-shaped cell in which the pigment could expand or contract according to the intensity or quality of the light. Later, these automatically controlled cells would enable him to vary his background color to suit the changing conditions in the watery world he was to occupy.

Within the body cavity, still visible through the translucent tissue developing under the pigmented skin, an elongated silvery tube lay just below the backbone. In time this swim bladder would regulate the fishlet's buoyancy by changing the volume of the enclosed gas to compensate for gain or loss in weight as the fish changed depth or entered salt or fresh water.

On the flank of the fishlet a series of specialized cells formed a cord extending from the neck region almost to the tail—the forerunner of the lateral line sense organ which was to help in guiding the fish in the long travels before him.

The eye, too, was completely formed by this time; the dark pigmentation of the eye-cup was conspicuous through the semi-transparent envelope of the egg and the pupil stared fixedly into the darkness of the buried shelter.

Both the mouth in front and the gill-opening on each side of the head behind the eye were well developed, and the minute muscles which operated these parts were flexed periodically as if in preparation for their job to follow.

Behind the neck region a tiny, paddle-like fin had made its appearance and it too was periodically put into motion as the embryo squirmed within the confines of the egg membrane. The worm-like body now ended in a delicately modelled fan-shaped tail which whipped from side to side with the restless motion.

The greater part of the space within the egg was still occupied by the yolk sac, reddish-orange in color and enclosing two spheres of several sizes.

A hundred days after they were laid the eggs began to hatch. A few eggs resting in an enclosed space bordering the main mass developed weak spots in their outer membrane. During particularly vigorous squirming movements the embryo in one ruptured the membrane at one of these points and the head popped out, to taste running water for the first time.

After a short rest period the squirming fishlet again struggled violently, pulled free of the shell and lay on its side, gapped in the darkness of its shelter. Others quickly followed suit until before long many alevins were resting among the egg shells in the spaces beneath the gravel.

Some hatching embryos were less fortunate at this critical stage of their life. A few, by some mischance, began to emerge tail first and became hopelessly trapped with the head still enclosed in the egg membrane. Unable to free themselves in their constricted quarters they died. A few others began to hatch in the normal manner but possibly because of some inherent weakness they failed to complete the strenuous process, expiring partly emerged.

Young Kisutch was more fortunate than these. Occupying a space within the main group of eggs and possessing the required energy to burst through the constricting membrane along with the majority of his brothers and sisters and stretched out, relaxed along with them, bathed in the gentle current of water which filtered through the covering gravel. Here he rested in preparation for the next phase of his existence.

LOOSE ENDS

Surviving a Sabbath in Stratford

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON: Across the street from an old timbered house stood a maiden lady, of middle age, from Portland, Oregon. She was staring gloomily at the birthplace of the greatest Englishman. Perhaps she imagined a little boy looking through these narrow windows for the first time upon the fields of Avon, demi-paradise, upon the great globe itself. A thousand poets, as Browning remarked, had pried at life but only that little boy, amid the strife, rose to be Shakespeare.

No wonder the spinster from Portland was gloomy. She had come here expecting to find at least the distant flavor of Elizabethan England, a lingering whiff of Shakespeare's time. Instead, she had found Stratford on a Sunday evening to be a noisy horror of packed streets, honking buses, roaring motorcycles and trippers who gorged on ice cream cones or fish and chips.

THE Salvation Army band assembled in the public square for its Sunday evening service but its music and its voices were drowned out by the thunder of the traffic. Amid the tumult of this Sabbath Shakespeare was quite forgotten and yet he had brought the crowds here. His fame had made a tourist's Stratford, alien to his nature and ignorant of his work.

In this town Shakespeare is not a poet. He is an industry. Stratford is not a shrine. It is a honky-tonk. On this Sabbath it is leagues closer to Coney Island than to Arden.

The American lady watched the crowds surging past the house of Shakespeare's father, without a sidelong glance at the miracle wrought there, and after a while she turned sadly away. In the hotel lounge I saw her writing a lengthy letter home. Doubtless she was telling the folks in Portland that Stratford had betrayed its mighty son.

INVITATION TO ADVANCE

The West Takes the Lead Toward Peace

ANY inclination to disparage the assertion that the United States is the postwar leader of the western world must have been dissipated by the address delivered last Thursday by President Dwight Eisenhower. In its breadth of vision, in its humanity, in its direct constructive approach to the major international problem of this era, the speech was an appropriate expression by the leading man of the leading nation.

It was indeed, as Prime Minister Churchill generously said, a "massive and magnificent statement of our case."

Despite its emphasis on peaceful intent, there was nothing of weakness in the statement. It dealt firmly with the issues involved. It faced the alternatives without shrinking, it foresaw with clarity the inevitable consequences of failure. There was no equivocation in the assessment of that failure: at best a life of perpetual fear and tension; at worst, atomic war.

MOMENTOUS DECLARATION

In what diplomatic circles conceded was a "momentous" declaration, one which will form the basis for quotation and debate for many months to come, the President made six main points.

These were that the United States is ready to limit arms and ban atomic weapons by treaty; that out of the billions of dollars saved through disarmament the U.S. would join in a fund for "world aid and reconstruction"; that a Korean armistice should be the first step toward a world settlement; that there should be guarantees against further aggressions in Indo-China and Malaya; that the satellite nations and Second World War prisoners should be freed and Austria restored to independence; and that the iron curtain should be lifted to permit free movement of persons, trade and ideas.

These are concrete issues. Their solution would demonstrate beyond doubt that the Soviet is sincere in its talk of peace, that the Stalinist dictum that communism and capitalism can share the globe is a Kremlin conviction and not a deception.

SIMPLE TEST

As the President said, "The test of truth is simple. There can be no persuasion but by deeds."

That put it squarely up to the Russians. The "peace petitions" that alleged millions have signed at Communist instigation appear academic in the face of such proposals. Here were numbered points demanding action—action which would prove once and for all whether Communist talk of peace meant anything more than propaganda designed to create anti-democratic feeling.

Disarmament, of course, was the key proposal. The effects would be two-fold. Disarmed nations would not provoke war. The vast sums of money expended on armaments could perform invaluable service to mankind if employed in bettering the lot of those in need, thus removing a potent cause of war.

ARMS CONTROL

Several points listed by Mr. Eisenhower summed up his disarmament plan. Each nation's armed forces should have a limit set by agreement; arms production should be similarly restricted; atomic weapons should be prohibited; and atomic energy controlled internationally; other weapons of great destructiveness should be limited or prohibited; United Nations inspection should safeguard the pact.

Here again the outline was simple. Here again a concrete answer could be made to a concrete proposal.

It is not likely that the President's statement was made as a result of the new line that has been emanating from the Kremlin since Mr. Malenkov's elevation to the late Joseph Stalin's chair. True, he may have seen encouragement in recent Russian words and actions. But the Thursday speech was a logical and integral part of the policy Mr. Eisenhower laid down when campaigning for the White House post.

That policy was to take the initiative in the cold war. Too long, he declared, democracy had appeared to suffer in tension and paralysis, anxiously waiting for the next Kremlin move. Now the United States would take the lead, not in the sense of striking blows first but in offering workable plans for peace and progress which would put the onus on communism to answer.

It may have been on just such a morning as this in 1616 that a little knot of townsmen carried the body of Shakespeare into the church, none of them knowing what they buried here.

TODAY another gathering—14 in all—had assembled in the church for a different purpose. A few feet from Shakespeare's grave a ruddy farm boy was married to a plump, blushing girl in a sky-blue suit. The service was said by the minister just as solemnly as if Shakespeare himself were being married, and the music of the organ rolled through the little church as it has rolled for how many other brides?

Here was the old story which the Stratford boy knew so well and wrote and rewrote in countless versions, comical and tragical. Another lover and his lass had come to church and taken their vows in the springtime, the merry ringtime with the heigh-nonny-no as bright and promising as it ever was.

So the new bride and groom rose from their knees beside Shakespeare's bones and walked, laughing, out of the church into the sunshine, where a photographer awaited them. The original Stratford boy would have liked that.

THE CHURCH PAGE

By LANCE H. WHITTAKER

Many challenges face the church in 1953, but none is greater than the need for more men in the ministry. Victoria is better off than most cities—having a large number of retired clergymen who still do yeoman service in small churches, or as assistants—but even here the bulging church schools and the large districts not adequately served are symptomatic of a national shortage.

A spontaneous and mixed gathering of newspaper office people came up with these reasons (just trying to be helpful to the church editor in search of a column):

1. Serving the church requires long years of expensive preparation for which there is no material reward worth mention.

While this was certainly the first and most obvious answer, subsequent discussion proved that few felt it was as important a factor as some of those following.

2. The church appears to have lost some of its sense of mission and no longer presents a strong challenge of service to its youth.

This point was largely agreed, although its pertinence was felt to be lessened partly by the changed position of the church in modern society and partly by the fact that emotionalism, as expressed through the evangelical approach, no longer has the power it once had.

3. Declining church attendance has had the consequence of narrowing the number of young people exposed to the call of the ministry.

It was agreed that only a small proportion of church-going youth has ever felt called to service, and that such proportion shrinks with the number of church-goers. While evidence was produced to show that church membership has grown with the increase in population, it is obvious that a large part of the membership attends only infrequently at church, whereas weekly family attendance was usual a generation ago.

5. Strongly put as perhaps the most important factor was the decline in the prestige of the minister as a person of consequence with an important role to play in the community.

Personal contact with the clergy is limited for a large number of people to such occasions as weddings and funerals, with the consequence that he is looked upon almost as a tradesman who may be called when occasion arises.

Such a viewpoint degrades the cloth, and does no honor to our people, but there is no denying that it is prevalent enough to have diminished the minister even in the eyes of his congregation.

It is a factor which weighs heavily with young men choosing a career, faced as they are today with many occupations which have been elevated through the years to professional or semi-professional status.

During coming week it is proposed to discuss this question, point by point, in this space. Helpful comment and opinion, by phone, letter, or in person will be welcomed.

SHRINES OF MEMORY

Old City Families Kneled in St. James

By N. deBERTRAND LUGRIN

I have had many requests to write something about a little church which is gone and the place thereof shall know it no more. It exists only in the memory of those who attended it in the latter part of the last century and in the first years of this century. It was St. James Anglican Church on the corner of Quebec and Pender Streets in James Bay. It was very convenient to those who lived in that well-settled community, and it was for a long time very popular. Not an impressive looking building from the outside, but warm and welcoming within.

St. James was consecrated in 1885 and we are told it was a beautiful day and that the interior of the church was lavishly decorated, the windows curtained with vines and flowers. The clerical procession was an impressive one; "Bishop of Hills" proceeded down the aisle followed by Bishop Paddock from Washington, and the clergy. It was Bishop Paddock who preached the sermon and the church was filled to capacity.

FIRST INCUMBENT

Canon Beaulieu was the first incumbent of St. James. His appointment was a popular one for he was widely known and very much esteemed.

Among the many attendants in those early days we find the names of Mrs. Mallandaine, Mrs. E. Johnson, Miss Vidler, Mrs. Praeger, the Misses Loewen, the Dunsmuir family, Miss Higgins, Mrs. Smith, the Wolfenden family, Mrs. Gore, the Gamble family, Mr. Troup and others which would make too long a list. I believe that Archdeacon Scriven followed Canon Beaulieu. But when we attended St. James, Archdeacon Sweet was the incumbent.

LARGE MAN

It was Archdeacon Scriven who was responsible for the appointment of Rev. John H. S. Sweet as an archdeacon of Victoria. Scores of Victorians will remember him with affection. He was a very large man, tall and dignified. His wife, a gentle, kindly woman whom we all loved, was tall too and the children grew up to be like them. Jack, the oldest, was tallest of them all, a fine handsome fellow who lost his life at Vimy in the First Great War. His grave with countless others is in Villiers au Bois in France.

In the heyday of St. James, if one may use such a term in connection with a sacred edifice, the church hall was in almost constant demand for concerts, plays and dances. Nearly all of the young people of James Bay gathered there to take part. The hall is gone now and the rectory too, as such, but the memory lingers with many of us who were then in the springtime of our youth.

One of the attractions of the church was the choir. Mr. Petch was the leader, as we remember, and there were many fine voices. The organists were among the best in the city. The well-remembered Howard Russell was one of the early ones, and following him were Messrs. Archibald, Duncan, Myers, Sidney Colbert. Mr. Russell's sister Agnes must not be forgotten in this connection. She was an accomplished pianist, and played during the latter years of St. James, which was the scene of many fashionable weddings. The music on such occasions and on Christmas and Easter and other celebrations was always uplifting and beautiful.

International Hi-Y Parley Planned Here

Discussion groups on youth's responsibility in the community and school will be held April 25. There will be a tour of the Parliament Buildings and museum and dinner in the evening.

Dr. W. J. Wilson will be the guest speaker. A dance will follow. The conference will adjourn at noon April 26.

GREAT PREACHER—Dr. Robert James McCracken, 49, a former professor at McMaster University, Hamilton, Ont., and now pastor of New York's famed Riverside church, has been named one of the 12 great preachers of the United States by Life magazine. Dr. McCracken, born in Motherwell, Scotland, was assistant professor of Christian theology and philosophy of religion at McMaster from 1938-44. He received his doctor of divinity degree from McMaster in 1946. The congregation of Riverside church extended its call to Dr. McCracken, as successor to the famed Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, in March, 1946. (CP Photo.)

Housewife's Question Inspired Great Novel

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—If it weren't for a question asked by a housewife named Mrs. Hazel McCann, 10,000 people wouldn't be working on a multi-million-dollar movie today.

Mrs. McCann, living in Canton, O., in 1939, wrote a letter to novelist Lloyd Douglas asking what became of Christ's robe for which soldiers gambled at the foot of the cross.

She suggested the answer to her question might make a story.

The result of her query was Douglas' best-selling novel, "The Robe," and the wide-screen film from it that producer Frank Ross took 10 years to get on the screen.

Mrs. McCann was imported by 20th Century-Fox studio from her present home at Alameda, Calif., to inspect the supercolossal production she inspired.

"Mr. Douglas did not want a 'circus' made of this film," the housewife said firmly as she walked through the impressive sets of false marble and metal, peopled with milling extras in whiskers, jogs and Max Factor Pancake No. 5.

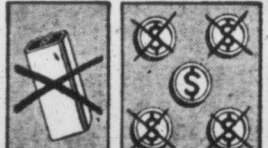

"I hope the message in the story is not lost," Mrs. McCann said she decided to write Douglas "because the idea for the story occurred to me and wouldn't get out of my mind. I believe in those little voices, you know, and one told me to do it."

"A week later my husband—he was ill at home—called me at the store where I was working and told me I had a letter from Lloyd Douglas in Los Angeles. I had forgotten about my letter, and had to stop a minute to think who it was. I never dreamed he'd answer."

The late Douglas not only thanked Mrs. McCann for the

SURPRISINGLY FRANK

Fourth Book on Life of Burns Tells of Struggle for Ideals

THE CREST OF THE BROKEN WAVE, by James Barke, Collins, Toronto; $3; 320 pp.

By HARRY WOOD
President of Victoria Burns Club.

This is the fourth of a series by the same author, dealing with the life and loves of Robert Burns.

Written in the same style and vein as the others, it deals with the poet's life during his tenancy of Ellisland. It is redolent, not of academic cloisters, but of cottage hearth and country tavern, of Scotland in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

Burns has returned from his brief triumph in Edinburgh drawing rooms to the problem of making a living for "wife and weans," not an easy task on the "mean, sour, unproductive acres of Ellisland."

However, this is the time when he is at the height of his productive powers; time when he produced many of his finest songs and poems.

Rationalized by experience but still overflowing with inspiration, he spent his days and nights between farm cares and the joy of creation.

Saddled with many debts and determined to help his mother and brother who have suffered financially, he decided to apply for what appeared to be the solution of his economic problems: a position as an excise officer at 50 pounds a year.

The author spares neither detail nor description as to much of the private life of the bard, at times being surprisingly frank. But all this leads up to much that explains the deep, emotional nature, the mental and spiritual make-up of Robert Burns.

Readers who take into consideration the time, the social and economic life of Scotland with which the story deals, will get the better grasp of why Burns felt in his heart for the American and French revolutionaries, and composed his poems on independence. "All Europe seemed to be heading for wars and revolutions. Nothing remained constant; nothing seemed permanent in the affairs of the state any longer."

The chapter on the "genesis and evolution of 'Tam O' Shanter'" is of interest, and will delight all Burns' devotees who read it. Some of the original lines not included in the poem are included here, which may cause some eyebrows to lift.

The difference in outlook on life by Gilbert Burns caused Robert at times to clash his brother in unmerciful terms, and each evaluates the other's character in some strong arguments.

Traveling over rough roads at that time on a pony, sometimes as many as 200 miles a week, carrying out his duties as an excise officer, gave the bard time for reflection and inspiration to compose many of his songs which we admire today.

The aim, plan and scope of the book seems to be the desire of the author to place in the hands of students of Burns, a down-to-earth story dealing with all that surrounded the life of the man as a farmer and as a poet, with the emotions and the imagination of one who loved his fellow men and cried out against the unequal balance in society.

WITHOUT CANT OR SHAM

He was no mere accidental by-product of an age. He was gifted with a mind which received impressions clearly, and expressed them fearlessly—without cant or sham. Burns saw this in an age where the acquiring of money and property was the measure by which men were judged, and his natural independence rebelled.

The stage was set before he was born and he could not change it. Like thousands of his fellow travelers whose lives were governed by hard practical considerations, his tomorrow was anticipated with doubt, sometimes with dread.

Nevertheless, the crest of the wave had been reached, and later breaks. As the days pass, many of his letters written to friends shows the remorse he feels for much that has affected his life.

There are pages of those letters which contain prose writing comparable to the best prose in the realm of literature. In moments of reflection one can turn to them for a better knowledge of the Ayrshire plowman whose writings have influenced man, and whose songs and lyrics have added much to the joy of mankind in a prosaic world where selfishness holds so much sway.

DISAPPOINTMENTS, FRUSTRATION

His prose, reproduced in the book, shows a man burdened with strange stirrings of a life full of bitter struggle against forces within him, and 'thout—a long with dance with some success as material considerations are reckoned, but with much disappointment and frustration.

But ideas are power, and these live when systems have vanished. Those ideas about which Robert Burns wrote and sang have now been recognized by later generations, and appear to be entering into the scheme of mankind for the planning and making of a better world.

This volume should prove a valuable addition to any Burns library.

AMAZING PROVINCE

Flowers Bought Horses

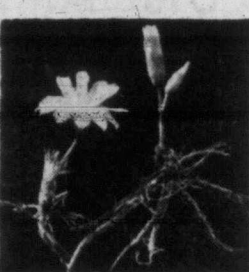

This is the time of year for that most versatile little flower—the rock rose or bitterroot.

As the spring sun warms the open slopes and benches of the Okanagan and Thompson River Valleys, patches of the most inhospitable ground suddenly blush with dabs of pink.

To the Indian tribes of the past, struggling for survival, this event was of great significance.

So hard-packed is the ground or shaly soil nurturing this showy plant that any root system appears almost out of the question. Yet it was this one hidden feature that made it so highly prized by the Indians.

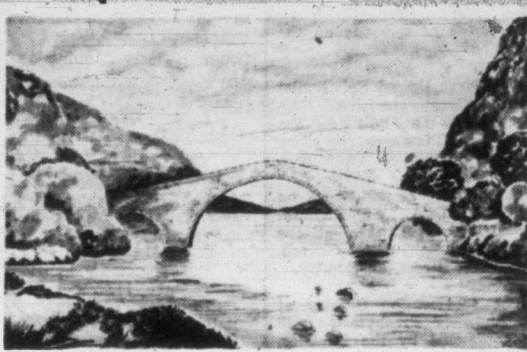

To these resourceful natives the roots were almost what potatoes are to the Irish. In favorable places such as between Ashcroft and Spences Bridge the bitterroot flourished in almost unbelievable abundance. Twelve plants to the square foot were a common thickness with double this amount in various patches. Even at as late a date as the First World War, the Indians made encampments each spring at the bitterroot grounds. So highly valued were the roots that a sack of them would buy the best horse in the country.

World's Oldest City Impresses Travelers

The early December sun shone warm and bright as our freighter made fast to the modern wharves of Beirut.

The origin of this city, like all very ancient cities, is lost in the mists of the distant past. It is known, however, that men have lived here since the Neolithic period.

Later the Greeks and Romans developed and improved it and Alexander the Great is given credit for the introduction of Hellenic art. It was the Romans who founded the famous School of Law in 222. This school rivaled those of Athens and Byzantium for three centuries.

Flood and earthquakes have taken their toll over the centuries, during the fifth century almost total destruction was recorded, the Mamluks rebuilding and the task being taken up by following generations.

The city today is a thriving metropolis and the seat of government of the young Republic. With several days in port we had lots of time to travel north and south by car, covering all most parts of the Republic.

Driving south to the biblical city of Sidon, the ruins of the old seaport seem pathetic in the narrow confines of the city which they now occupy. Named Sidon, after the grandson of Noah, who repeatedly built the city, it has had a tragic history. Gazing down on the peninsula

BOOK TALK

By JAMES SCOTT

Tonight, the men of letters of Toronto, which is the publishing capital of the country, are gathering for a testimonial dinner to Franklin Davey McDowell. Just what kind of testimony we are going to make to Frank is something I'm not quite sure about.

I hardly think we'll be saying too much about the fact that he has just retired from many years' service as the CNR public relations officer for the central region, although the services he rendered in that capacity to absent-minded writers who remembered half an hour from departure time that they had forgotten to make proper reservations have probably done as much to smooth the national creative processes as the Massey Report.

Somebody, no doubt, will have something to say about his historical novel, "The Champlain Road," which won a Governor-General's award about 15 years ago and which was reissued in a new handsome format about three years past. It was a good novel but writers rarely get dinners for only that these times.

A THANKLESS TASK

Certainly everybody who there to honor Frank will have a sense of gratitude to him for shouldering one of the most thankless tasks in the world of Canadian writing. Until last year, Frank McDowell was the chairman of the committee which handles the Governor-General's awards. This means that every year he had to wheedle and cajole some 15 unwilling judges into reading the output of Canadian writers during the year.

It means that he had to correlate their often conflicting decisions and make sure that the medals got to the right people.

It means that after it was all over he had to listen to all the complaints and protests.

For years Frank has been explaining to irate ladies that the late Lord Tweedsmuir did not say that any book with a nasty word in it was not eligible for a medal.

He has been telling publishers that the awards are for literary merit and that just because one house happened to publish half a dozen novels or two it could not automatically assume that it would get the medal for fiction.

He has smiled his way through griping and viewing-with-alarm until you'd think there wasn't a grin left in him. But there always is, and that is one of the reasons why his friends want to honor him tonight.

They want to tell him, too, that they think it was a fine thing for him to get busy and arrange for the new president's medals from the University of Western Ontario for short pieces of writing and that they appreciate all he did to facilitate the award for distinguished writing which the University of Alberta now makes. And they won't forget that he had a hand in UBC's award for good Canadian biography.

In short, Frank has been willing to take a lot of punches in defence of his belief that Canadian writers can do with a little recognition from their fellow citizens. For that, many thanks.

WHAT NOW?

In spite of his active life, Frank McDowell is still a very busy fellow. I asked him the other day if he was going to find time now to do some more writing on his own. Well, yes, of course. But his old employer, the CNR, has a few odd jobs they want him to tackle and for a while he is going to be pretty busy. My guess is that he will stay that way for many, many years.

But there is one thing I'd like him to see. Ever since his friend, poet Ned Pratt, wrote "Brebeuf and His Brethren," Frank has had a dream of writing that magnificent narrative poem staged up at the Martyrs Shrine near Midland where the Jesuit Fathers were massacred.

There is a natural amphitheatre there and even now thousands of visitors and pilgrims journey to the shrine every year. Frank thinks that the work of a great Canadian poet on a mighty Canadian theme ought to be offered every year to those people.

Many times the idea has been almost fulfilled but something has always kept it from realization. I wish now that I could find the time to go after this and get the scheme launched. I can think of no finer way for him to round out a career of unselfish service to Canadian writing.

FESTIVAL FEVER

The great literary festival which is already under way—

the Shakespeare Festival which is to run for six weeks in Stratford, Ontario, this summer with Alec Guinness and Irene Worth playing the leads in "Richard III" and "All's Well That Ends Well"—has got that town so literary conscious that practically nothing happens there these days which doesn't have a Shakespearean connotation.

Take the case of the Stratford man who was just promoted to sergeant of detectives. Believe it or not his name is Mark Anthony!

CONVENTION DATES

The annual convention of the Canadian Authors' Association will be held in Toronto this year from June 22 to June 25.

In a preliminary report, convenor Isabella Lebourdais says she already has almost 50 writers, publishers and critics lined up to make speeches and take part in discussions.

Assuming that our writers work an eight-hour day, that means that each speaker will have about 40 minutes to harangue his fellow authors.

For my money that's at least half an hour too much for any Canadian writer I know. Our authors should be read not heard.

NAIRNE ON STAMPS

According to an announcement from Lisbon, the long-awaited set from Mozambique, in East Africa, showing "20 barboletas diferentes," is now on sale.

"Barboletas" are, in plain English, "butterflies," and as these are shown in their natural colors, they really make a gorgeous showing when set out on the album page.

For the scientifically minded, it may be noted that about half of the insects depicted are actually moths, but still, they're a colorful bunch.

Each insect is duly labeled with its Latin name, some of which make it pretty hard going for these dainty creatures when they are trying to do their best to flit lightly from flower to flower.

For instance, a large swallowtail (which, by the way looks very much like its local cousin that visits our flower beds in May and June) is branded "Papilio Anthedus Evombaroides Eim," while the beauty shown on the 6 escudos value has to stagger around with this one—"Xanthoplopteryx Mozambica Mab!"

The stamps are printed by Enschede of Holland in multi-color photogravure, and values run from 10c to 20 escudos.

GRUBER CONDUCTS

'Madhouse' of New York Spurs Longing for Pastoral Victoria

By HANS GRUBER
Since I last chatted with you, and shortly after our final concert of the season, I boarded a plane, on which I spent some 14 rough hours, thank you, and when I next felt terra firma underneath me, I found myself lighting in Miami Beach, Florida.

I will not tell you much about that place, because the Miami Chamber of Commerce would institute a libel suit against me, which would cost me the last shirt off my back for the rest of my days.

Suffice it to say that after 72 hours there I took the car and sped northward towards New York City as fast as the night-way patrol would let me, and sometimes faster.

Those 1,500 miles took also 72 hours. I am now comfortably lodged in this giant madhouse of a city, longing already for that pastoral nerve-medicine that is Victoria, B.C.—but this is the last leg of the journey to my family home in Toronto. I shall breathe easier once there—another few short days.

And now I have some more things to tell you about Stokowski and the concert I heard him conduct with the Seattle Symphony Orchestra recently.

In my estimation, by far the finest piece of work of the evening was his account of the Organ Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor by Bach—transcribed for orchestra by himself.

ONE OF THREE GREATEST

This work is perhaps one of the three greatest architectural structures in all music, or its equals, being the first movement of the "Eroica" Symphony of Beethoven, and also the first movement of that master's Ninth Symphony.

Every last detail of this monumental structure was projected with complete clarity and with profound understanding. Yet that minute attention to detail and to every one of the contrapuntal voices did not prevent the conductor from achieving an over-all effect of overwhelming grandeur and nobility.

Stokowski, the master conductor and musician, struck an inevitably perfect tempo at the very beginning—slow, stately yet with an irresistible forward moving pulse.

Purely for the record, it can not be said that the actual execution of the orchestra was impeccable, especially as to intonation—it was the opening work on the program and some of the winds were still cold—though there was throughout the evening a remarkably good string sound—but that only lends weight to the cliché—but every cliché does have an element of truth within it—that there are no bad orchestras, only bad conductors.

The "Bach" was followed by an orchestral scene from Schubert's "Rosamunde" ballet, of which, to our taste, an overly romantic production was made.

MEMORABLE CONCERT

Next came the colorful and realistically exciting and nationalistic music of Manuel de Falla—orchestral excerpts from his opera "El Amor Brujo." The First Symphony of Johannes Brahms closed this memorable concert.

In this work especially, Stokowski revealed himself as the typical "permanent" conductor of a crack-orchestra. By that I mean that his masterful economy of gesture was perhaps overdone, inasmuch as the feeling prevailed that he left too many vital and difficult cues to the orchestra to find for themselves, while he himself concentrated on conducting and building the "music" itself.

This sort of procedure with many another conductor would make one suspect his absolute knowledge of the score, but this very suggestion in Stokowski's case is, of course, too ridiculous for words. His method of indicating time-signature could sometimes be open to doubt to an orchestra that is just somewhat less than "crack" and not used to him. For instance, in a six-eight passage such as opens this symphony Stokowski does not beat six-eight, but twice three-eight, so that each bar has two downbeats—but I am quibbling now—it is the end, not the means, that count.

Still, I take it as a tribute to the Seattle Orchestra that there was only one real faulty entry in the wrong place in the whole symphony, which Stokowski had under control almost the instant it happened, and during those moments showed that he can beat in as clearly an orthodox fashion as anyone.

OF THIS AND THAT:

I like to think I'm a reasonably tolerant guy. But some things get me down.

Although—unlike most of my fellow critics—I'm willing to overlook the rattling of the popcorn bags, whispered comments, the unhappy wail of a baby, I'll be darned if I'll forgive the certain elation which seeps into our theatres and laugh at every and all scenes that even remotely resemble drama. I have in mind, for instance, scenes like Kirk Douglas tossing Lana Turner out of his house in "The Bad and the Beautiful," Claudette Colbert screaming a warning at Jack Hawkins in "Outpost in Malaya" and, above all, the crash of the jet in "Breaking the Sound Barrier."

Oh, these were very funny scenes for the clunks, the guys, and dolls who if they had one brain between them it would rattle. They roared with assumed mirth and knock themselves out, utterly and callously ruining the show for those around them. Obviously words like consideration and thoughtfulness are as lost upon them as their home upbringing.

What is even worse, many times I've heard them encouraged by some of the audience laughing with them.

Under such treatment the finest dramatic performance by a cast can dissolve into a meaningless mockery.

But for today that's "30."

The RECORD SHOP

By RICHARD KLEINER

Next to wagering on horses and predicting the weather, making records is the biggest gamble around. So along comes Archie Bleyer, starts a company, makes one record, and presto, a hit.

"This was no gamble," says tall, greying Bleyer. "People were asking for it before we made it."

The record is Julius LaRosa singing "Anywhere I Wander." It's on the Cadence label. Second offering will be a LaRosa version of "My Lady Loves to Dance," and it looks promising. Bleyer is musical director of the Arthur Godfrey shows, and LaRosa is the young Godfrey.

900 COMPETITORS

Record Festival Opens In Victoria Next Week

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

Swallows have flown westward into Victoria, daffodils have flown eastward, marbles have appeared in small boys' pockets—spring is here!

Of course there are a few other clues to the change of the season—such as flowers blooming and a speeding up of activity on the entertainment front.

HIGH SPOTS

Two major festivals lead the way, but there are also a host of individual concerts and one or two productions that will be high spots of the next few weeks.

Exhilarating news concerning the musical festival which opens on April 23 and runs until May 2 is that a record entry list has been received—more than 900 competitors will be adjudicated by the five judges who will come from various parts of Canada and the United States.

A feature of this year's festival will be the entries in 42 separate events, made by a small, highly proficient group of Portland piano students. There will also be a total of 35 entries from up-island centres, which must make participation from outside points close to a record high for any Victoria festival. No doubt I will be corrected if I am wrong!

RUBINSTEIN CONCERT

That is the month of the Rubinstein concert too.

The world-famous pianist who will play at the Royal Theatre, April 30, has been concertizing for more than 50 years, but that does not make him very old. He began his career in Berlin at the age of 11!

I have a feeling few people actually realize what a tremendous thing is the Dominion Drama Festival, nor what it means to the city in which it is held. It is a brilliant event; it has all one could wish of glamour and excitement and festive spirit, and the eyes of Canada are turned enviously on the fortunate city where the cream of the country's theatrical talent is gathered.

Probably about midway in the week of May 4, Victorians will wake up to what is happening; raise their eyebrows and exclaim: "Why, we never knew—why didn't somebody tell us?"

EIGHT CHOSEN PLAYS

The eight chosen plays, two in French and six in English, will demonstrate, for the first time on the west coast, just what is being accomplished in Canada, in the theatre line. I have small hesitation in prophesying that it will be found exciting and a revelation.

More about this history-making event next week, when I will have some interesting gleanings for you.

In the meantime, Community Drama Office, which means mostly H. S. (Bunny) Hurn and Miss Anne Adamson, is working hard alongside the festival committee to make the week-long affair an outstanding success and a revelation to the visitors of Victoria's theatre-mindedness, warm-heartedness and hospitality.

ART in REVIEW

By COLIN GRAHAM

Most nations being a bit upset these days, it is not surprising that a certain amount of hysteria is noticeable in public life from time to time.

What is surprising is the way in which abstract art seems to be providing a sort of public focus for much of the current uneasiness. Canada, let us be thankful, remains relatively sane, or if you like lethargic, in this respect; yet we too have our silly seasons.

In Toronto not long ago an abstract painting was exhibited showing a fish skeleton and bits of kitchen paraphernalia resting on a table.

Jazz Concert Sunday Night

In an effort to keep alive their Sunday night concerts, Gordon King and his 17-piece modern orchestra will foot their own expenses in the fourth of a series of informal jazz concerts Sunday night in the Victoria Ballroom at 8.30.

A poor gate at the last show resulted in the band losing its sponsor. However, the musicians decided to sponsor themselves in this next concert and the attendance will decide whether or not the shows will continue.

Featured soloists this week will be drawn from the rhythm section. Drummer Mike Pretty will be featured in Stan Kenton's "Artistry in Percussion," while bassist Doug Peaker will do the solo work in "Safranski," another Kenton opus.

CYD CHARISSE is a springboard Lorelei in this candid camera shot taken while she was on location filming "Sombbrero" in Mexico.

Proud of Beauty Spot

Because of a famous beauty mark, Universal-International began snipping material from three gowns worn by Arlene Dahl in the Technicolor "Desert Legion."

The alterations were at Miss Dahl's request, so she could display a cute little mole below her right shoulder rather than hide it by the exotic outfits she wears in the picture as princess of a hidden city in Algeria.

"That beauty spot is a trademark with me," she told Director Joseph Pevney.

Empress Golf Tournament Results Told in Picture Form

Vic Painter, left, and Bill McColl, of Colwood Golf and Country Club, met for the third time in the Empress open championships Friday and Painter emerged victor of this meeting on the 18th hole. It was the rubber match, both having won one previous tourney championship. McColl can make up for the defeat by winning the 36-hole men's handicap championship today. His opponent again will be Painter.

J. B. Rawlings of Tacoma scored a hole-in-one at the 23rd annual Empress golf tournament Friday and is shown receiving a trophy from his opponent, Dr. F. E. Fowler, Astoria, Ore., after completion of the match, which Rawlings won, 1 up, to advance into the fourth-flight finals. Rawlings used a four iron on the short 188-yard 13th hole and aced his tee shot. Fowler's defeat was possibly attributable to the hole-in-one, as he appears to indicate to Rawlings. (Times photos.)

Ford Leads Virginia Golf Open

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)—Doug Ford, fourth-leading money winner in professional golf this year, fashioned a four-under-par 65 here Friday to move into the halfway mark lead in the $12,500 Virginia Beach open golf tournament. Ford's 65 and his first-round 63 of Thursday gave him a 36-hole total of 128, 10 under par for the 6,065-yard course.

The 30-year-old pro from Harrison, N.Y., held a three-stroke advantage over Dick Metz, who established a course record on Thursday with a sizzling, eight-under-par 61.

Metz, long a prominent figure on the tournament trail, had difficulty finding the green Friday and took a 70, giving him a 131 for the first 36 holes of the 72-hole event. Dave Douglas of Newark, Del.; Bo Winger of Oklahoma City, and Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., were deadlocked for third place with 134s.

EMPERESS GOLF RESULTS

The 23rd annual Empress golf tournament concludes at Victoria Golf Club today with an all-Victoria men's championship final and an international women's title match.

Vic Painter and Bill McColl, both of Victoria, are playing in the men's final and it is the first time in the history of the tourney that two golfers have met in the open and handicap finals in the same year.

Pressure-player Painter edged McColl in the open Friday, 1 up, as both divoters toured the course in two-over-par 71s.

McColl was one hole down after getting a birdie four on the 17th and was six feet from the flag on his second shot on the 18th hole when Painter exploded a spectacular shot.

Short of the green on his second, Painter left the gallery limp when he sank a perfect chip shot to take the match.

McColl defeated Chuck Royal of Seattle, 1 up, Friday, and Painter eliminated J. W. Kendall of Portland by an identical score to move into today's handicap finals.

Royal, behind one hole going into the 18th, nearly equalled Painter's chip but the shot rimmed the cup and rolled four feet past. McColl sank a 10-foot putt for a par four, while Royal missed his for a bogey 5.

WOMEN FINALISTS
Mrs. W. Erickson of Victoria ousted Mrs. J. Lerbach of Astoria, Oregon, 3 and 1, and Mrs. G. Greene of Seattle defeated Mrs. W. McKenna of Victoria to advance into the women's final.

J. B. Rawlings of Tacoma ached his four-iron shot on the 188-yard par three 13th hole for the first hole-in-one of this year's tourney. He downed Dr. F. E. Fowler of Astoria, 1 up, to advance into the final of the fourth flight.

Selke Praises Habs, Team To Be Honored

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Canadiens, still aglow over their newly-won Stanley Cup hockey honors, will be feted Monday night. Managing director Frank Selke said Friday the players, club officials, press, radio and TV representatives—and wives, too—will gather at a victory banquet to celebrate the occasion.

Selke also indicated he may have something to say about next season. But he was still beaming and all smiles over the Canadiens' 10 victory Thursday night over Boston Bruins—a victory on Elmer Lach's overtime goal that gave Canadiens the series final four games to one.

"Not only are we going to have this banquet," said Selke,

Olympic Games Fate To Be Decided Today

MEXICO CITY (AP)—The international Olympic committee is expected to decide today whether Melbourne will be the host city for the 1956 Olympic Games.

The Australian law which prohibits importation of horses unless they have been in England or Ireland for at least six months.

The Australians finally proposed that horses of participating countries be concentrated in England or the United States and inspected there by Australian veterinarians before being shipped to Melbourne. Japan, among others, pointed out this would be a handicap to Far Eastern countries.

Formal sessions of the IOC opened Friday with a welcoming address by President Adolfo Ruiz Cortines of Mexico.

Among changes voted at Friday's meeting were:
1. No professional athletes may serve as a member of any Olympic committee—including national Olympic committees.
2. No political demonstrations would be allowed in Olympic stadiums.

The committee turned down a proposal to substitute an Olympic anthem for the national anthems played after Olympic victories.

Rocks Gain Player Help

Salmonacs' Bob Anderson Among Five New Arrivals

Victoria Shamrocks increased their potential player poke by one goalie, one defenseman and three forwards today with the announcement that five out-of-town players would be turning out for the team.

Bob Anderson, former Adanac and New Westminster Salmonac defenseman, has been transferred by his firm to Victoria and will join the team in the first week in May.

Sarge Sammartino, Al Gill, Boh Dadds and Gord Donalland, all from the Vernon club of the Interior Senior B League, arrived in town this morning and intend to turn out to all practices with an eye to landing regular spots on the club.

Forwards Sammartino and Gill were one-two in the Interior individual scoring race last year, the veteran Sammartino and the 17-year-old Gill finishing far ahead of the rest of the league. Dadds was goal-keeper with the Vernon club but little is known about Donalland.

Vernon won the B.C. Senior B championship last year, defeating Victoria's powerful Foul Bay club.

Gill, Dadds and Donalland intend to take up residence in Victoria whether they make the Shamrock club or not. All four will be at the Shamrock practice Sunday morning at 10.30 at Memorial Arena.

Anderson, a bruising type of defenseman, will be remembered by local fans for the running feud he carried on with Norm Baker, whom he inevitably checked when the Irish played New Westminster here.

Although his player transfer has not yet been approved by the Intercity Lacrosse Commission, it is expected to be merely a matter of form as the New Westminster club management has approved.

Shamrock coach and Red McMillan announced this morning that all five players would be given every opportunity of making the team.

Shamrocks will follow Sunday's workout with night practice Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, ending their pre-season championship last year, defeating Victoria's powerful Foul Bay club.

They will have Monday and Tuesday nights off before they meet Nanaimo Native Sons here April 29. They travel to New Westminster on the following night.

Golden Bears Square Dominion Hoop Final

EDMONTON (CP)—University of Alberta Golden Bears used a good first-quarter lead and their ability to match Toronto Nottown Tri-Bells point-for-point Friday night to take the second game of the Canadian senior men's basketball final 76-65 and tie the best-of-five series 1-1.

The winning pattern was identical with that used by Tri-Bells in the first game Thursday when Alberta, hesitant and wary of a team they knew nothing about, got away to a slow start and wound up with a 62-60 loss. The third game is tonight, with the fourth Monday and the fifth Tuesday if necessary.

Alberta's two Macintosh brothers, Don and Norm, led the scoring with 17 points each. Don, who netted 10 points on five shots, was a standout on defense. Ed Lucht, Golden Bears' tall centre, added 16.

Glen Pettinger, Tri-Bells captain, and six-foot eight-inch Bud Natanson each scored 12 points. Harry Litvack followed with 11.

Charlie Needs Help As Springs Team Up

Charlie Guiguet ran into a bit of fun while fishing alone off Oak Bay Friday night when two 19-pound springs took his two lines at the same time.

While reeling in one of the silvers, the other fish was running line out so quickly that it snarled in the reel so Charlie started screaming for help.

Bill Rose, fishing about a half-mile away, heard the plea and came to the rescue, bringing in the other spring. Rose later picked up a five-pounder.

"Tiny" Richards scored the first catch of the evening with a 26-pounder.

Swim Gala Tonight

A noisy gang of juveniles will make a big splash at Crystal Gardens tonight when the Victoria Amateur Swimming Club plays host to about 30 members of the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club in a 22-event gala starting at 6.30.

Victoria coach Bill Robertson will have close to 25 youthful swimmers entered to do battle with the Vancouver squad, coached by Percy Norman.

B.C. juvenile champion Reg Griffin will head the list of hopefuls from the Mainland city which include Susan Sangster, Karna Kent, Linda Shier and Helen Stewart, the quartet which recently broke the Canadian freestyle relay record for juniors.

RANGERS AND CELTIC—'THE OLD FIRM'

One of Soccer's Greatest Rivalries

Almost 80 years ago Scottish football history was created. It was about that time a band of Gareloch youths arrived in Glasgow and, in what must have been an inspired moment, decided to form a football club. Oddly they took the name "Rangers" from an English football annual and played their first games on the open spaces of Glasgow Green.

In 1887 Edinburgh's Hibernians, pride of the Scottish-Irish population, won the Scottish Cup for the first time. Celebrations in Glasgow evidently inspired the ambition of the "Paddies" to form a club of their own bearing the name of Celtic Football and Athletic Club with headquarters at Celtic Park, Glasgow.

Hence was born the "Old Firm," two of the most celebrated clubs in the football world, and certainly the keenest rivals the game has ever known.

From those modest beginnings rose the two clubs destined to share the half a century—excluding the "war years"—almost all the major honors in Scottish football.

To date, Rangers, who later moved to Ibrox, have won 27 league championships and 13 Scottish Cups. Celtic have held the cup a record 16 times and have had 19 league successes. In 15 Scottish Cup ties between them, Celtic have won nine and Rangers six.

Their meetings have provided some of the most memorable football encounters ever seen, yet, strangely enough, despite their dual supremacy in the '30s, they had not, until last March 14, played each other in a Scottish Cup tie for 25 years.

As a result of the Ibrox quarter-final win in this year's series, Rangers qualified for yet another semifinal, although their 1928 encounter with their old rivals was in the cup-final.

A 4-0 victory that day gave Rangers the trophy that had eluded them for 25 years, though they had unsuccessfully contested five finals in that time, including the notorious "riot final" of 1909 when the cup was withheld because of unseemly incidents among the crowd.

Because extra time was not played after two drawn games against Celtic, the crowd became angry, tore up crash barriers, set fire to pay boxes and pulled out the Hampden goal posts. Their conduct left the Scottish FA no alternative but to suspend the competition for the first and only time in the history of the cup.

In the early days of the Rangers-Celtic encounters the followers of the two clubs met in friendly rivalry and used to gather after "Old Firm" games became the meeting ground of hooligans who apparently regarded the event as a battlefield for religion; fighting on the terrace, bottle throwing and other deplorable tactics began to be associated with Rangers-Celtic games.

Unfortunately this element, which has driven many decent people from football, is still to be found at these games, but every precaution is taken to ensure that the thousands of loyal supporters of the two teams enjoy the game in comfort and without annoyance. The Glasgow police attempt to segregate the supporters of each club at opposite ends of the park to minimize any riots that may arise. This segregation provides, however, a most colorful spectacle for the Rangers' supporters side is a mass of blue, while Celtic's supporters frantically wave their green and white banners.

While it is regretted that this unsavory reaches such proportions it is generally agreed it all adds local color to these games. It is also agreed that these two great teams will be remembered for their feats on the playing field and not the comparatively small incidents of spectator participation.

Curling 'Spiel Nears

65 Rinks Enter First Such Event

Victoria's first bonspiel, under the sponsorship of Victoria Curling Club, is scheduled to get under way Monday night at the Quadra Street rink with the playing of the first round of the Grand Challenge event.

Sixty-five rinks are scheduled to take the ice in the first round, with rinks from Vancouver, Nanaimo, Duncan, Port Alberni, Oliver, Penticton, Honeycomb Bay, Seattle, Calgary and Edmonton vying for laurels in the four-event bonspiel.

Bill Hyde has the honor of skipping the oldest rink entered in competition. Hyde is 83, while G. H. Hansford, third; H. J. Decker, second; and J. J. Mason are all well into their seventies.

The event is divided into four sections, with the winners of the two major divisions, the Grand Challenge and Victoria Press Cup event. Losers will drop into the Ker-Stephenson and Eaton Trophy divisions. One rink will thus compete in two events at the same time. Grand aggregate winner will be awarded the Henry Birks & Sons Trophy.

Winners of the W. C. Dunstan versus W. A. MacDougall match will meet G. Cathro in a contest to eliminate the one extra team.

BABE WINS FIRST ROUND IN BIGGEST TOURNAMENT

BEAUMONT, Texas (UP)—Babe Didrikson Zaharias, who has been a winner at every sport she ever tried, apparently has gained the upper hand in a battle against a dread malignancy.

At least, that was the preliminary verdict today from a five-man surgical team which saw her through a tortuous three-hour operation at Hotel Dieu (hospital) Friday.

The 39-year-old Babe, whose current forte is professional golf, was reported "resting well" early today by hospital attendants who said she came through the strenuous ordeal in "fine condition."

And, a spokesman for the doctors said, "if things go as well as it looks, she probably could take part in athletics again—but how soon it's too early to say."

BABE HIT ONE FARTHER

Mantle's Blow Second Best

NEW YORK (AP)—Mickey Mantle came close, but missed Friday by 38 feet hitting the longest home run on the unofficial records.

The young New York Yankee centerfielder teed off on a pitch by Chuck Stobbs of Washington and the ball traveled an estimated 562 feet.

The blow put Mantle in second place in the long-ball sweepstakes. The longest home run ever was hit by Babe Ruth in Briggs Stadium, Detroit, in 1926. It is said to have traveled 600 feet.

From now on your can scratch off "unbeaten" when you're talking about the 1953 major league baseball teams.

With only five days gone and a dozen games played in each league, every one of the 16 teams has lost at least once. The last three—Milwaukee, Cleveland and Brooklyn—bowed Friday.

All save Washington has won at least once. The longest streak was two games, certainly nothing to excite the faithful, but at least for the Braves it equalled their best consecutive victory string in a season and a half.

The Braves, who would like to think they left their losing habits in Boston when they moved to Milwaukee, put up quite a fight to make it three in a row, but a desperation ninth-inning rally in Cincinnati fell one run short.

The Redjacks edged them, 10-9, as young Joe Nuxhall got the side out with the tying run on second base.

TRIBE FALLS
A ninth-inning rally that was successful enabled Detroit to end Cleveland's two-game streak, 6-5.

The Dodgers bowed to New York Giants, 6-3, in the afternoon half of a day-night twin bill at the Polo Grounds, although they hustled back into the win column with a 12-4 decision under the lights.

In other action New York Yankees whipped Washington, 7-3, Mickey Mantle driving a 562-foot home run, one of the longest in baseball history; Philadelphia's Charlie Bishop shut out Boston Red Sox, 5-0, on five hits, and St. Louis Browns edged the Chicago White Sox, 6-4, in Chicago, with the temperature only four degrees above freezing.

Mantle's drive bounced off a beer sign 457 feet from home plate and landed in a back yard 105 feet behind the park.

The renewal of the Giants-Dodgers feud saw Sal Maglie go six and two-thirds hitless in the afternoon game before a wind-blown fly ball by Jackie Robinson eluded Monte Irvin in the seventh. Maglie then had to have help from Hoyt Wilhelm, who finally quelled the Dodgers with the bases loaded in the ninth.

After getting nowhere for four innings against Jim Hearn in the night game, the Dodgers exploded for six runs in the fifth and four more in the sixth to leave no doubts. Billy Loos scattered nine hits for the victory.

SMITHS FALLS NEARS ALLAN CUP FINALS
KITCHENER, Ont. (UP)—The Smiths Falls Rideaus were a good bet today to meet the west for the Allan Cup after facing the Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen, 7-4, to take a commanding 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven eastern final.

The Ottawa Valley champions hoped to clinch a cup berth with a victory in the fifth game, to be played tonight at Guelph.

SPOKES NIP BRONCS
SPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—The Spokane Indians, with George Triandos batting in the winning run in the last half of the ninth inning, beat Lewiston Broncos 4-3 in an exhibition Western International League baseball game here Friday.

Bill McKinnon won first place in the Capital City Classic League Friday night and is now the proud owner of a Morris Minor convertible automobile.

Bill turned in a five-game total of 1,317 pins, including 60 hand caps, for his winning score.

Other scores in the championship roll-off were: Dick Jewsbury, 1,245-44, 1,289; Don Corbett, 1,248-28, 1,276; Art Marchant, 1,144-100, 1,214; Bud Baldwin, 1,098-80, 1,189; Bus Stoddart, 1,068-76, 1,144; and Cy Wallis with 1,141 from scratch.

Chayko rolled high single of 326 in the championship roll-off, in which all eight competitors took home prizes.

SECOND "400"
Sixteen-year-old Ken Smith stole the thunder from the finalists when he racked up his second score over the 400 mark this year. Ken rolled five straight strikes, left a corner two in the sixth and spared it, added five more strikes before leaving a corner one on his last ball for a 427 score.

His total score of 1,616 was high for the night and won him the consolation play-off.

His total score of 1,616 was high for the night and won him the consolation play-off.

The major-league-concluded scheduled play this week and a dozen games played in each league, every one of the 16 teams has lost at least once. The last three—Milwaukee, Cleveland and Brooklyn—bowed Friday.

All save Washington has won at least once. The longest streak was two games, certainly nothing to excite the faithful, but at least for the Braves it equalled their best consecutive victory string in a season and a half.

The Braves, who would like to think they left their losing habits in Boston when they moved to Milwaukee, put up quite a fight to make it three in a row, but a desperation ninth-inning rally in Cincinnati fell one run short.

The Redjacks edged them, 10-9, as young Joe Nuxhall got the side out with the tying run on second base.

TRIBE FALLS
A ninth-inning rally that was successful enabled Detroit to end Cleveland's two-game streak, 6-5.

The Dodgers bowed to New York Giants, 6-3, in the afternoon half of a day-night twin bill at the Polo Grounds, although they hustled back into the win column with a 12-4 decision under the lights.

In other action New York Yankees whipped Washington, 7-3, Mickey Mantle driving a 562-foot home run, one of the longest in baseball history; Philadelphia's Charlie Bishop shut out Boston Red Sox, 5-0, on five hits, and St. Louis Browns edged the Chicago White Sox, 6-4, in Chicago, with the temperature only four degrees above freezing.

Mantle's drive bounced off a beer sign 457 feet from home plate and landed in a back yard 105 feet behind the park.

The renewal of the Giants-Dodgers feud saw Sal Maglie go six and two-thirds hitless in the afternoon game before a wind-blown fly ball by Jackie Robinson eluded Monte Irvin in the seventh. Maglie then had to have help from Hoyt Wilhelm, who finally quelled the Dodgers with the bases loaded in the ninth.

After getting nowhere for four innings against Jim Hearn in the night game, the Dodgers exploded for six runs in the fifth and four more in the sixth to leave no doubts. Billy Loos scattered nine hits for the victory.

SMITHS FALLS NEARS ALLAN CUP FINALS
KITCHENER, Ont. (UP)—The Smiths Falls Rideaus were a good bet today to meet the west for the Allan Cup after facing the Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen, 7-4, to take a commanding 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven eastern final.

The Ottawa Valley champions hoped to clinch a cup berth with a victory in the fifth game, to be played tonight at Guelph.

SPOKES NIP BRONCS
SPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—The Spokane Indians, with George Triandos batting in the winning run in the last half of the ninth inning, beat Lewiston Broncos 4-3 in an exhibition Western International League baseball game here Friday.

HEARD CLICKS IN FIRST START

L'il Jehosie Heard, who southpawed his way to 20 victories, including a no-hitter, while he was one of Cec Garriott's pennant-winning Victoria Tyees last year, is finding the Pacific Coast League not one mite tougher than he found the Western International League.

Heard drew his first starting assignment for Portland Beavers Friday night and stopped the San Diego Padres cold with a four-hit 2-1 victory.

Previously, Heard had pitched 13 innings in relief without being scored on. However the Padres broke the string with a run in the third inning, ending his streak at 15 consecutive innings. His record is now two victories and no losses.

Friday night Heard got his victory when Jim Russell chased in the tying run with a fly ball in the 10th inning to break a 1-1 deadlock.

RAINERS WIN

In other games Seattle twinned Sacramento in a double header, winning the first 8-4 and the second 3-1; Los Angeles scored three runs in the last two innings to down Hollywood Stars 3-3; and Al-Gietek pitched Oakland to a 3-0 victory over San Francisco.

Trade Prospect Pleases Howe

Canada's Trade Will Hit New Highs in 1953

OTTAWA (BUP)—Canadians have never been more prosperous and the country can look for another good year in 1953, Trade Minister C. D. Howe said last night.

Presenting the spending program of his department to the Commons, Howe said present Canadian expansion was not based on temporary boom conditions and was not a "flash in the pan."

"It reflects the growing diversity and adaptability of Canada's industry and the capacity to produce economically an increasing proportion of the world's requirements."

Howe described 1952 as "a year of notable progress in standards of living for the Canadian people."

"Capital investment absorbed no less than 22 per cent of our national output," he said, "and there is every reason to believe that investment outlays will show a further significant increase in 1953."

He said there were indications that outlays for housing, trade establishments and other construction would be considerably increased in 1953.

"In total," he said, "it is now estimated that the 1953 capital expenditure program will involve outlays of $5,400,000,000, compared with $5,100,000,000 expended last year."

Howe said that if investment plans were realized, this would be the sixth straight year in which capital outlays reached more than 20 per cent of total national production.

He painted a bright picture of Canadian export trade and replied to suggestions that Canada was trading too much with the United States for her own good.

Exports amounted to $4,400,000,000 in 1952, a 10 per cent increase over the previous record year 1951.

Livestock producers took a setback because of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease but "grain producers have benefited from a record crop accompanied by a strong world market for their product."

"In the present crop year," Howe said, "we expect to export all the wheat that can be handled by our transportation and storage facilities."

STRONG POSITION

"The continuing world-wide demand for our major export products and the relative stability of our export prices provide evidence of a basic strength of Canada's position in world trade," Howe said.

Canada had been fortunate in having U.S. markets open and receptive to her goods during a period when trade with her traditional markets in European and sterling area countries were reduced, the trade minister declared.

Profit Nearly Double

MONTREAL (CP)—Consolidated Bakeries of Canada, Ltd., had net profit in 1952 of $451,649, or $1.35 a share, compared with $232,620, or 69 cents a share, in 1951.

Time Private Capital Encouraged to Make Foreign Investments

International Private-Funds Flow Possible if Three Steps Taken

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP)—Countries wishing to attract foreign money must put out the welcome mat, Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said in an address to the Empire Club of Canada here.

Urging that private investment to the foreign investment field, Mr. Funston said contributions by the governments of the United States and Canada to world recovery and mutual defense, though they had been vital, were admittedly "stop-gaps, not too much admired by the giver or the receiver."

"It is high time that government backed out of the foreign investment scene and high time that the private investor stepped in. But the private investor cannot be just tolerated—he must be invited and welcomed."

THREE STEPS NEEDED

To encourage the international flow of private capital, three things were necessary:

- 1—Governments of countries seeking capital "must take a fresh, hard look at such deterrents to investment as export or import quotas, limitation on remittance of profits, control of capital movements, multiple exchange rates, fear of nationalization or expropriation, special taxation of foreign enterprises, undeveloped banking facilities, inability to deal with responsible government officials, restricted local participation, discriminatory enforcement of tax laws and requirements for the reinvestment of earnings."

- 2—The governments of the United States and Canada, and those of other capital-exporting countries "have their own job to do to facilitate the flow of tries overseas. Very little of the increase took place in exports to the United States, where we just about maintained our position last year and even improved it a little bit.

"Consequently, the percentage of our exports going to the United States has declined steadily, which I am sure that all members will agree is a healthy sign."

"Our efforts to diversify our exports have been paying off," the trade minister said.

He said it was encouraging to see the way the trade and financial position of the United Kingdom had improved in recent months.

"Such improvement is a good thing for Canada, from every point of view," he said.

GREAT POSSIBILITIES

Latin American sales had been expanded and there were great possibilities there for further sales of manufactured goods of all kinds.

Concerning world trade in general, Howe said negotiations of profound importance for the future of trade and commercial policy would have to be conducted during 1953.

"Consideration will have to be given by the major trading countries to the future of the international program which has been established under the general agreement on tariffs and trade," he said.

"Since the tariff undertakings of the general agreement are firmly bound only until the end of 1953, decisions will have to be made among the countries concerned as to what further steps to take to safeguard the future of international trade."

Howe said the role of the United States would be a crucial one and he was sure that constructive American leadership would not be lacking when it was needed.

Calgary Power's Growth May Force Revision in Rates

CALGARY (BUP)—Calgary Power Ltd. had gross operating earnings of $8,920,133 during 1952, a 17.9 increase over earnings the previous year.

Net operating income increased 34.5 per cent to $6,358,676, to give the company a net profit of $2,464,548 for 1952, although $335,000 of this was paid out for preferred dividends.

Operating expenses dropped by $275,992 to $2,561,457 because steam-generated power was reduced to a nominal amount during the year, chiefly through the increase in hydro-electric facilities.

G. A. Gaherty of Montreal, president of Calgary Power, said in his report to shareholders that "rapidly mounting construction and operating costs present a difficult problem," which would make an upward revision of rates necessary.

Canada had been fortunate in having U.S. markets open and receptive to her goods during a period when trade with her traditional markets in European and sterling area countries were reduced, the trade minister declared.

SIGHTSEEING CENTRE TO BE BUILT BY BCE

An ultra-modern "sightseeing centre" to serve as sales headquarters for sightseeing tours is to be built on the southeast corner of Belleville and Government, the B.C. Electric announced today.

The centre, to be headquarters for Royal Blue Line Tours, a BCE subsidiary, will incorporate the latest features in glass and streamlining.

The building will be set against a landscape garden in keeping with the "city of gardens" theme.

The site is leased from the provincial government.

RECORD BOOKINGS

Royal Blue Line Tour officials said today early bookings point to a record season of sightseers.

"It is our intention that the centre will be such as to attract the interest of tourists, who will inquire further as to the city's many beauty spots."

Fenimore Plans Big Development On Ungava Bay

QUEBEC CITY (BUP)—Fenimore Iron Mines Limited will spend $68,000,000 to exploit iron ore deposits near Ungava Bay.

Premier Maurice Duplessis announced last night that the company propose to establish a refinery, a hydro-electric power plant and an industrial centre of 10,000 population on the west coast of the bay near their fields.

Duplessis said Fenimore already had found more than 566,000,000 tons of rich iron ore along an 80-mile strip of land in the area.

LABRADOR IRON FIND

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (BUP)—A valuable find of high-grade iron ore has been made in Labrador and 50 claims already have been staked.

Premier Joseph Smallwood says the find is in a section where the newly-formed British-Newfoundland Corporation holds mining concessions.

Smallwood says actual mining might get under way in two years.

VSE Transactions Up But Value Down

During the first quarter of 1953 12,838,693 shares were traded on Vancouver Stock Exchange. Total value was $10,747,114. In the same period of 1952 12,455,000 shares valued at $14,607,000 were traded.

Mining issues have led the way this year as oil shares did in the first part of 1952 when the oil boom was in full swing.

Here are the first-quarter 1953 statistics with the 1952 figures in brackets:

Mines: 9,714,470 shares valued at $5,911,423 ($5,599,000 worth $64,000).

Oils: 2,903,694 worth $3,114,002 (6,737,000 worth $8,724,000).

National Hosiery Net Profit Down

National Hosiery Mills Ltd.'s dollar sales volume last year was about the same as in 1951, although physical volume of sales increased approximately 22 per cent.

President E. B. Eastburn said this factor, together with increased wages and general costs, resulted in lower net profits for 1952 in spite of substantial operational economies established over the past several years.

Net profits for 1952 amounted to $268,054, equivalent to 73 cents on the combined Class A and B shares outstanding. This compares with $342,415, the equivalent of 93 cents on the combined shares for the previous year.

Langley Oil Well Signs Encouraging

Encouraging indications of the presence of oil in commercial quantities near Langley in Fraser Valley are reported by Emery Hanson, manager of Siloam drilling syndicate.

Siloam holds a drilling permit covering 10,000 acres in the Langley Prairie area. Its test well, five miles east of Langley, now is at the 767-foot level. Traces of oil and gas were found at 482 feet, 580 feet and between 742 and 750 feet.

B.C. department of mines has not yet received drill samples for analysis, so will not comment on Mr. Hanson's report. However, departmental officials are scheduled to visit the well-site next week.

BASE METALS DROP 5.81 POINTS

Indexes of Leading Exchanges Drop Sharply as Buyers Scarce

By HARRY KINGDOM
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Base metals took a beating on the Toronto Stock Exchange this week.

The market as a whole—measured by the exchange's indexes—dropped an average of 3.87 points. Base metals alone dropped 5.81 points on the week.

Observers said the losses probably resulted largely because the market still is in the grip of a decline that started with Communist "peace moves" late in March. The apparent change in attitude in Moscow left the whole international situation uncertain and investors adopted a policy of wait-and-see.

Friday saw the sharpest decline of the week, but traders said little heavy selling pressure appeared. Scarcity of buyers caused prices to fall even under mild pressure.

Base metals have been falling off gradually ever since January. Lower world prices for lead, zinc and other metals have been generally blamed.

Many industries stopped stockpiling base metals in 1952 and started using up what they had on hand. This resulted in reduced orders to primary producers who were forced to cut prices to keep their products moving.

President Eisenhower's "challenge to disarm" speech Thursday was another factor. Many investors followed established practice of selling vulnerable stocks Friday so that they would not be caught unprepared by new international developments that might result from the speech during the week-end.

Prices moved along a downward path in Montreal and Toronto Monday but turned firmer in Montreal Tuesday. Toronto prices continued to slip Tuesday but turned mixed with Montreal Wednesday. Montreal continued mixed Thursday while Toronto headed lower. Both centres dropped Friday.

New York prices held steady Monday and started upward Tuesday. The rise continued Wednesday but prices turned mixed Thursday and dipped Friday.

From Friday to Friday, the Toronto exchange indexes showed industrials down 3.70 at 309.75, golds down .53 at 79.74, base metals down 5.81 at 159.84 and western oils down 3.46 at 116.84.

In the Montreal averages, banks were down .36 at 32.73, utilities down .8 at 93.7, industrials down 1.7 at 192.7, combined down 1.4 at 159.7, papers down 1.42 at 663.04 and golds down .10 at 61.02.

In New York, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down $2.30 at $109.00.

Base metals have been falling off gradually ever since January. Lower world prices for lead, zinc and other metals have been generally blamed.

Many industries stopped stockpiling base metals in 1952 and started using up what they had on hand. This resulted in reduced orders to primary producers who were forced to cut prices to keep their products moving.

President Eisenhower's "challenge to disarm" speech Thursday was another factor. Many investors followed established practice of selling vulnerable stocks Friday so that they would not be caught unprepared by new international developments that might result from the speech during the week-end.

Prices moved along a downward path in Montreal and Toronto Monday but turned firmer in Montreal Tuesday. Toronto prices continued to slip Tuesday but turned mixed with Montreal Wednesday. Montreal continued mixed Thursday while Toronto headed lower. Both centres dropped Friday.

New York prices held steady Monday and started upward Tuesday. The rise continued Wednesday but prices turned mixed Thursday and dipped Friday.

From Friday to Friday, the Toronto exchange indexes showed industrials down 3.70 at 309.75, golds down .53 at 79.74, base metals down 5.81 at 159.84 and western oils down 3.46 at 116.84.

In the Montreal averages, banks were down .36 at 32.73, utilities down .8 at 93.7, industrials down 1.7 at 192.7, combined down 1.4 at 159.7, papers down 1.42 at 663.04 and golds down .10 at 61.02.

In New York, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down $2.30 at $109.00.

Is there any simple way of combating Primula (strawberry) weevil without removing plants?

Several local gardeners have reported successful control by using dust containing chlordane as a soil fumigant. Follow manufacturers instructions on container.

Montbretia should be lifted now and the individual corms (like gladioli) separated and planted. In many parts Montbretia is dug each fall the same as gladioli.

JACK BEASTALL SAYS

Soil Cries Out for Waste Homeowners Throw Away

Jack

Where there is no humus, there is no plant life. At first this seems to be a debatable statement, but it can be followed through to a point which proves that where humus is lacking there are only inert materials such as rock, sand or clay. It is true these materials form the foundation of soil, but they cannot support plant life until humus is added, and humus is plant tissue or animal residue in some stage of decomposition.

Mixed with finely pulverized rock and clay, humus makes what we call top soil. As our plants grow they use up the humus in the form of plant foods, and unless the latter is replenished it soon becomes bare. So important is the function of humus reference to it is found in most chapters of books on gardening.

There are also volumes devoted to methods by which this precious commodity may be produced at a speed far greater than nature's methods. These processes are commonly referred to as composting.

While the books devoted to this subject are most essential and should be read and understood by all who garden, some of the described methods appear so involved and to require so much labor gardeners have become frightened into doing without compost as long as possible.

SHOULD BE COMPOSTED

In the average home garden the amount of plant and kitchen refuse is pitifully small compared with the area under cultivation. Even so, the small quantity collected should be composted and then judiciously used where most good will result.

The wife who is not allowed to compost for her flower borders can take heart because the problem of finding enough material to compost is not so dire as we sometimes believe.

Man, that wasteful creature, destroys or discards much material which could well be added to our soils. Anything which originated as part of a plant or animal will decompose and produce food for new plants. Many other materials will improve the texture of the soil and provide better conditions for the growing of plants.

Sawdust, residue from a plant, is just becoming recognized in gardening.

As with all new ideas, some gardeners are going to extremes. Soil cannot supply food for plants and at the same time digest raw materials. If the sawdust cannot be composted with either manure or spent hops, it should be applied only to the surface as a mulch and allowed to weather for a summer and a winter before being turned under.

GOOD AS MULCH

While gardeners are paying out good money for loads of sawdust they are often setting fire to the debris from the year's supply of wood fuel. The coarse sawdust and bark dust which remain after the chunky pieces have been raked off is excellent as a mulch, to which the sawdust and shavings from the basement workshop can be added.

The vacant lot will often produce a goldmine of humus, the garden refuse dumped by neighborhood gardeners over many years.

Old sacking and wool or cotton rags, coming originally from plants and animals, can be rotted down in an inconspicuous corner and later added to the compost heap. Several gardeners have told me they let old cartons rot and add a small quantity to each barrowful of good compost. Paper may be treated the same, but be wary of printed sheets because of the dyes used in the ink.

DRIED GRASS

Dried grass hay makes an excellent mulch if cut before flowering, and at the end of the season it can be dug or rotary tilled into the soil.

When gathering plant refuse for a compost heap, add the partly burned wood ash from an open fireplace or from burned prunings. These are extremely valuable. Also add the contents of the vacuum cleaner and chimney soot from coal or wood fires, not oil soot.

Most compost heap failures are due to either an insufficient amount of material, insufficient moisture, or because the heap does not generate sufficient heat during the first 48 hours.

STACKED ON BARE EARTH

Compost heaps built in the open must measure four feet by six feet at the base, and be four feet high to be successful. Smaller quantities of material should always be placed in a bin so as to conserve moisture and heat, and give a reasonable depth to the pile. The bin may be an enclosure of suitable size, down to a wooden box with top and bottom removed. The material must always be stacked on bare earth.

Moisture is essential to decomposition. One ton of hay requires nearly 1,000 gallons of water to moisten it enough to start the breaking-down process. The gardener who remembers this will have the beginning of a good heap.

NATURE TALKS

By ROBERT CONNELL

Buttercups and Daisies

Passing along the street the other day I saw a lawn with a few patches of what looked like fresh-fallen snow on the bright green grass of spring.

But they were something more interesting at this season than snow. They were clusters of newly opened daisies, the little old-fashioned, white flower of childhood recollections—the "little flower with silver crest and golden eye" that the poet Montgomery sings of.

Its botanical name "Bellus," the latin for "beautiful," "charming," "lovely," well expresses the delight it has given for hundreds of years to old and young. The garden double ones lack the golden centre and thus miss one of the flower's chief charms—its "silver crest and golden eye," to say nothing of its crimson outer ring, Burns' "modest crimson tip."

When I reached Pemberton Woods, that neglected public park, I came on another flower we commonly associate with daisies, the buttercup. The very name recalls green pastures and herds of cows and cool daisies.

One sees little children in the grass plucking the golden flowers and holding them up under each other's velvety chins to watch for the reflection of the petals on the tender skin.

It has one of the purest English names of all our plants in its compound of two homely terms. Botanically it belongs to a long and vigorous family with the surname of Ranunculaceae, meaning "a little frog." This seems a curious name until we remember that the species that head the list of buttercups in a flora are all water-lovers and are found in those wet places frequented by frogs.

YOUR WEEK'S WORK

FLOWERS:

Make new plants from violet runners. Fertilize, keep shaded and well watered during summer.

After hardening-off, transplant to garden, viola, pansy, stock, Pentstemon, larkspur and border chrysanthemum.

Remove all faded bloom from daffodils and tulips, and give plenty of moisture until leaves yellow, to improve next year's bloom.

Tie in and train flowering vines and sweet peas.

Water evergreens located beneath overhanging eaves or in location screened from rain.

VEGETABLES: Sow outside-salsify (vegetable oyster) for fall use, and treat same as parsnip; New Zealand spinach for hot weather use; lettuce in succession, also beet and peas.

Give row crops a side-dressing of complete fertilizer and water it in. Keeps crops well cultivated.

Keep berry fruit trees free from weeds using a mulch on surface-rooting raspberries; mulch all fruits to conserve moisture.

Remove tomato plants to cold frame or a "cool" location. Admit air freely; protect from frost.

PRUNING: Specimens or hedges of box trimmed if necessary, or cut back if leggy. Santolina (lavender cotton) hard pruned to encourage bushy growth. Skimmia, only remove old, untidy branches.

Paint Your House When The Weather Is Right

After the weatherman turns off the April showers, many home owners are bound to step out in the glowing sunshine full of good humor and ambition to paint their houses.

First off, don't paint until the weather is clear, dry and the temperature is above 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

Start at the upper corner of one side of the house and work down, trying to finish one day's work at another corner or window to avoid laps or streaks when you resume painting the next day.

In painting clapboard siding, cover about six feet in a sweep before moving down to the next board.

Use a wire brush to remove loose paint and rust from metal roofs, gutters, downspouts and flashing and apply a metal primer to cover the exposed metal before brushing on the finish coat.

Good paint-brush care pays off, so it is always wise to suspend brushes in enough linseed oil to cover the bristles when your painting day is ended. The brushes shouldn't touch the bottom of the container.

Cover the paint can tightly to store paint over night. If a film forms on top of the paint, remove it—don't stir it in.

Langley High Invades Rival Oak Bay Campus

By BRIAN GRIER
"Welcome Langley" is the popular expression echoing through the halls of Oak Bay High this week-end, as students proudly reach a white-hot peak of hospitality as hosts to a group of visitors from Langley Senior High School.

On Friday afternoon about 30 students, members of Langley's senior boys' basketball and rugby teams, invaded the city, directing their attack on Oak Bay.

Upon arriving, the guests were hustled into cars and taken on a short scenic tour of the city.

Returning to the school, they were issued with souvenir programs outlining the events of their visit, saw their billets and were taken home for dinner.

In the evening a large, excited, informally dressed crowd justified its way into the streamer and banner-clad gymnasium to swirl to the lively tempo of Hughie Gray's Orchestra.

The "Men, from Langley" spent this morning in whatever way they pleased. In the afternoon the rugby teams were engaged at Windsor Park.

One of the highlights of the invasion will be a banquet to be held this evening in Oak Bay Junior High School when Principal C. A. Gibbard will extend the official welcome.

After the banquet the senior girls' basketball team will play a preliminary game prior to the feature return engagement between the two rep boys' basketball squads. Several house parties have been planned for tonight.

On Sunday afternoon Oak Bay will bid farewell to Langley High, hoping that it won't be long before a return visit can be arranged to further strengthen the bonds of hospitality and friendship that now exist between the two schools.

Baseball Gives Place to New School Block

By BETTE MARIE CARLSON
Except for the coming bazaar, sports are in the limelight at the moment, as exams are completed and those dreaded reports have been gladly returned.

Persons who came back to school more willingly after holidays because of the prospect of baseball received a severe shock. The sight confronting them dampened their enthusiasm.

Bulldozers and logs covered much of the grounds for the diamonds and earth was heaped high around what was left of the back-stops.

However, after the first astonishment, students realized this mess was necessary in the preparation for the new school. "Pride must pinch," they reflected.

Two of the diamonds can be used, but the house system would be disrupted if they were used for the house games.

Soccer, volleyball and basketball are being continued, while baseball is possible in PT periods and before and after school. The sacrifice is certainly worth while as the dream of a new school is at last becoming a reality.

CLOSE CONTEST Mount Doug Houses Race For Honors

By JOAN SUTHERLAND
There's never been a closer race for house honors at Mount Douglas High than this year.

Fraser, with 133 points, is just two steps ahead of Douglas, with 131, and Skeena is still in the running with 116.

Douglas won the 10th annual concert competition for the third consecutive year. Fraser House came second and Skeena third. All three houses provided an afternoon of fun-packed entertainment.

As the race for block awards continues, J. Brier, J. Sutherland, D. Woods, N. Lidstone, D. Glass and D. Johnson lead the list.

Great interest is now being shown in the tennis tournament, which will begin shortly.

The 1953 badminton champions fought their way to victory when the finals were completed before the holidays. V. Hearn captured the girls' cup by defeating L. Sjoberg. Victory over S. Stout gave A. Thomson the boys' cup. In mixed doubles I. Sjoberg and S. Stout defeated D. Woods and E. Badminton.

Psychology Course Set For Parents

Baby sitters will be busy on the nights Prof. W. H. Gaddes gives his course in child psychology at Victoria College evening division, starting April 28.

"There is considerable interest in the course and in a number of cases both parents are planning to attend," said an evening division spokesman today.

He suggested that persons wishing to enroll for the series of five evening lectures to be held on successive Tuesdays from 8 to 9.30, register by mail.

"Rather than line up on the opening night it will be more convenient for them to send name, address and phone number and enclose the fee to the registrar's office at the College," he said.

Fee is $3 for one person and $5 for a couple.

The series of lectures is a repetition of the successful course given by Prof. Gaddes of the College's department of psychology last spring.

Personality of the pre-school child will be stressed and related to possible outcomes, normal and abnormal, in later childhood and adulthood.

Problems of child-rearing will be discussed and explained in terms of recent psychological research findings. The course is designed for parents and teachers and those interested in psychology and personality development.

Penny Carnival Queen Crowned

Rose Fagan, crown and all, is enthroned at St. Ann's Academy, queen of the penny carnival. She is flanked by princesses Lorraine Bell, left, and Marjorie Hilton, right. Students paid a penny apiece to attend carnival, and a penny for each vote Wednesday. Queen Rose got 3,000 votes. The fund is for the school's "good works."

TAKE IT FROM ME

By AMY BANDREVIK

"Among the heather" or just the shrubs, there is nothing more amusing than listening to a couple of Scots boasting about their bagpipes. A couple of my college friends are avid pipers and the other day I was fortunate enough to be present during a comparison of their repertoires. Neither having his bagpipes along, they had to rely on their own vocal cords to demonstrate a tune they had forgotten the title of, or if one remembered a title the other wasn't sure if it was the same tune he knew, so either way they ended up sounding like prima donnas.

I used to be very fond of bagpipes until I heard their trail-al-las (which, to me, all sounded like "Road to the Isles"). Now, I'm not too sure if I still appreciate the traditional Scottish musical instrument and the tunes played on it. Of course, any expert bagpiper could very easily restore my faith by playing for me (anything but "Road to the Isles").

To me, bagpipes have always been synonymous with parades. The swirl of the kilts and the skirl of the pipes have always fascinated me, more than any other part of the parade. The clowns and the floats and the majorettes are all very nice, but give me a parade of pipers playing a soulful dirge or a spirited march and you can have the rest.

I've noticed some very dainty bagpipe pin cushions in several shops. It strikes me that sticking pins in bagpipes is the invention of someone who disliked them and wanted to practice a form of voodoo. And I'm afraid that I know several people who would like to do just that! It seems strange to me that the bagpipes should be such a controversial instrument. I've heard more arguments about them than any other, I don't know why.

Pupils Find Annual Task Takes Time and Patience

By MARJORIE LAWSON
Every school in British Columbia seems faced with the annual issuing of a "year book."

Anyone who has never been associated with the writing or the publishing of an annual will be unaware of the tremendous work and time a high school annual entails. From the time the staff is chosen to write copy, to canvas for advertising, until it is in the hands of the publisher and sales are well started, the task is a difficult one.

The first step in the organization is the appointment of a staff.

The editor may be envied, but his is a big job.

The advertising manager is the individual behind the financial success of an annual. He has his headaches, too.

An important step in putting together an annual is the soliciting of ads. While this is being accomplished, the actual writing is underway. While the different departments such as sports and personals are finishing their write-ups, the editor and the layout director and art editors plan the dummies.

Mount View's "Scribe" annual will go to press in approximately two weeks and the pressure is building up accordingly as time runs out.

Editor Barbara Whiteley has issued last-minute warnings to hand in all photos and written material. Circulation manager Donna Finch has issued receipt books to the class reps.

Bright posters and pep talks have swelled the quota of ads this year, as well as the promised subscription list, and a bigger, better annual is pledged. It will be out by June 5 at the latest.

STUDENT-TEACHERS TAKE OVER GREATER VICTORIA CLASSES

By CAROLE ANDREW AND SHIRLEY CANNON

Back to the well-known school routine, but with one noticeable change! Instead of coming back to the same teachers, students found themselves instructed by Normal School students—here at Royal Oak and elsewhere in Greater Victoria schools.

These student-teachers will stay on for two weeks before resuming their own routine at Normal School.

On April 29 and 30, and on May 1 Royal Oak will find itself sitting in the examination room grimly awaiting the start of third-term exams. As this school is not accredited, any students taking subjects requiring government examination in June will be writing two-and-a-half-hour exams to help prepare them.

The junior badminton tournament is over with Jean Ross and Ann Mattick winning the girls' doubles and Jan Ross and John Green the boys' doubles.

Several new clocks have been installed during the holiday at places of most usefulness. Just so the teachers won't work overtime, somebody said.

SCHOLARS' ROSTRUM

ANNE SKELTON

Next to food and shelter it is apparent that clothes are the most important item in the life of a high school student. Whether this is so or not is a touchy problem. It seems wrong that wearing apparel should take up the student's entire budget and yet without suitable clothes a person can be made to feel so out of place.

It is a fact that when you dress as others—for a girl this means a plaid skirt, sweater and saddle shoes; for a boy, stripes or cords, sports shirt and V-neck sweater—you feel as others. One sock dyed with a pink tinge in the wash, and you think people are laughing at you. A cotton blouse instead of a peek-a-boo nylon or fashionable sharkskin, and you feel as though you should be on a picnic instead of in class. A skirt that you hate but one which your father likes can ruin a day—or a week.

And so the teenage girl follows in her mother's footsteps. She enjoys fashion shows, often well aware that she can not afford the expensive show pieces but nevertheless appreciating the color, material and style. In time, some dreams do become realities.

Now, she notes the values of color shades and contrasts. With every coat she must have two or three sets of accessories. That trench coat can no longer be worn with loafers and a kerchief.

She realizes heels, scarf, hat and gloves must match. She feels it is her duty to society and to herself to appear as close to fashion's last decree as possible.

Sometimes she wonders why she does bother so much with clothing. Maybe the nudists have solved the problem. But it only needs another five dollars to buy that soft cherry-red sweater downtown.

Fifty-five former pupils of St. Louis College, members of the Alumni Association, dined at the Olde English Inn Tuesday. They represented graduating classes from as far back as the late '80's, and included Frank Sehl, George Burnes and Charlie Grimm. Bishop James Hill was the speaker.

Drama and Dance Provide Coming Events Interest

By PATRICIA PETRIE

Two events of importance this week at S. J. Willis High are rehearsals of the various choruses in the forthcoming operetta, "Princess of Penzance," to be presented at the school May 1, and the Grade Eight party.

There is mounting excitement among Grade Eight students as the party draws near. It will take place at the school on Friday, April 24. The entertainment is provided by the Students' Council. It consists of refreshments, a full-length movie and dancing—not necessarily in that order.

Just before the Easter holidays, the Students' Council made itself some extra money by way of an auction. This auction was primarily to dispose of goods which have been collecting in the "Lost and Found" since the beginning of September.

Studies Take Precedence In Busiest Term of Year

By MARG BELL

Students of Esquimalt High returned for an all-out scholastic effort till final June exams. Although in this last school term there is more extra-curricular activity than in any other, principal C. A. Kelly advised students to work hard towards their most important objective—a passing grade.

The Students' Association shield for the month of April in inter-class competition was awarded to Division 4 on the basis of the total amount of tickets for the school opera.

Esquimalt's PTA this week put on a tea and fashion show at the elementary school. Light summer frocks and coats were fashioned by the Victoria branch of Sweet Sixteen.

Track enthusiasts are running around in circles every morning, faithfully following the stiff schedule. Track hints, exercises and routines can be obtained from Mr. R. Temple. Inter-house track meet will be staged early in May followed closely by the inter-high meet at Vic High.

Girls' Y-Teens will hold a house party on April 22. Plans will be made concerning a new project and conference notes will be discussed.

The Drama Club is concentrating on writing original plays to keep within the club and the best will be produced. The Esquimalt PTA has asked the Drama Club to present its Drama Festival entry at one of the meetings.

The Junior Red Cross is winding up its project of knitting nine-inch squares this week. They'll be sewn into afghans for Korean children. New project is collection of baby clothes for needy Victoria families.

The Optimist Club again this year is asking Esquimalt High School students to support "peanut week." Each individual or club will receive 15 per cent of total earnings, thus giving EHS an excellent opportunity to help in a good cause.

The WITCH

THE United Nations sounds so grand to most of us, and the reports of it are so resounding, and the pictures of it so imposing that it might be well if we remembered that many of the people with whom we are united still believe in witches.

In Italy they do, and in South American republics, and in a fair number of islands and mainland localities under the British flag. Maybe I do, too.

In Italy, a small detachment of fanatical Germans were holding a village called Corleto in such a skillful and dogged fashion that an American squadron of daylight bombers undertook to blow the miserable little collection of ancient stone hovels and tenements right off the map. It was a flea-bitten flea bite of a place that was holding up a main road of our advance.

In typical mass-production style, the Americans sent a fighter plane ahead to drop leaflets warning the civilians to flee the village immediately, as bombers were already on their way to obliterate it. Then the glossy aluminum diamond of 12 planes, high in the sky, moved in and utterly squashed Corleto.

The Italian civilians had acted instantly on the warning and had fled into the fields and out the roads and lanes from the village. We encountered them there, as we cautiously approached the shambles of Corleto in our jeeps. Stunned and bewildered, their village levelled before their very eyes a moment before, they greeted us timidly and ran alongside us toward the ruins.

As almost invariably happened, there was one villager who had been to the United States and who could speak English. He was shoved forward proudly by his neighbors to act as interpreter.

"Sure," he puffed, hanging on to the jeep and running. "I work in Boston, in Fitchburg. I'm a good American man."

Ahead, the infantry had found that the only Germans left in Corleto were dead. The sight of our infantry straggling on beyond Corleto was the signal for the Italians to rise up out of the fields and to come streaming up the lanes back into the awful wreckage of their ancient dirty village.

"Did everybody get safely out before the bombers got here?" we asked our Boston boy.

"Sure, everybody," he assured us. "We were standing in the midst of it when from a little stone hut, sort of pen at the back of one of the smashed yellow houses, appeared a fantastic figure. Bent, gnarled, clutching a stick to support her, an aged woman with a beaked and shrunken face walked a little way and stood staring at us."

"All-a," whispered our interpreter, "but that one! The Old Witch, you call her in America."

"Witch?" we checked, a little impressed, in fact, by the grim little figure we were beholding.

"Sure, she's a witch," said the Italian. "She don't run. She's a-gotta the Evil Eye. Everybody knows she's a witch. Look! Everything's smashed. But she don't run! Not that witch!"

WELL, I for one am not scared of witches. Much. I'm an enlightened man, a hard-boiled newsman. Witches! I balled out of the jeep, my companions with me, and we went over to the weird old woman who had survived the calamity. Our interpreter stood back 20 feet and shouted his translations.

"She say," he called, "she safe-a wouldn't hurt a boy."

The American planes-a boys wouldn't hurt a boy."

The old crone mumbled and grinned. She patted our arms. From deep within the rags that covered her, she drew a scrap of paper and handed it to us.

"Take care of this old lady," it said. "She hid us for three nights of our way."

It was signed by a Canadian flight lieutenant and a Scottish infantry captain, prisoners of war escaping two months before.

"She say," shouted the interpreter, "she gotta sixa grandson in America."

So it happens that I have kissed the dirty clutching hand of an Old Witch.

King George VI was a working monarch, whose sense of duty during years of national crisis tragically shortened his life. Now, when newspapers and other services of public opinion in Britain are warning that Queen Elizabeth's health may be impaired by the same stern demands on her strength, we feel that this intimate behind-the-scenes account of the workaday life of George VI will be illuminating and perhaps even startling to many readers.

"The Good King"

ALTHOUGH he reigned without governing, George VI nevertheless managed to exert a real and powerful influence behind the scenes in political life, but because of his restricted constitutional role his intervention was necessarily roundabout and unobtrusive.

Much of his influence stemmed from the potentialities rather than the realities of his position—that is, George VI might have taken a firm stand, risking further curtailment of the monarchy's power in a head-on clash between State and Throne, but often the mere threat of it sufficed. Before any actual clash of personalities took place between the King and his ministers, the private secretaries on each side would have been alerted, and His Majesty's principal secretary, Sir Alan Lascelles, a most powerful though little-known figure in British politics, would strongly press his master's views. As the next step, the King himself would call in the minister for a face-to-face argument. In the final result, George VI would almost certainly give way, not because he was weak, but because of such major importance to the kingdom that it was worth risking the future of the Crown itself. But let us begin by pointing out the King's and his influential friends, and the loss of reward in the form of honors, would usually weigh heavily with any minister.

In strict constitutional form, George VI's ministers advised him, but in fact there are few of them who cannot recall occasions when they profited by his advice.

"It is one of the privileges of a prime minister to be able to discuss affairs of State with a man who is above the political battle, and who has had a long and continuous experience both of things and persons," commented Clement Attlee after the King's death. "I knew, too, that I would always get from him a well-balanced judgment."

The court is no longer the headquarters for party politics, as it was in Hanoverian days, and by maintaining equally good relations with all major parties the King, like his father before him, did much to smooth down political bickering. By virtue of his central position and continuation in office while governments came and went, George VI was perpetually accumulating background and experience more varied than any party leader can hope to possess. He was privy to all the secrets of his cabinets—indeed, they were technically his secrets—and whatever crises arose were first brought before him.

IMADE certain he was kept informed of every secret matter," said Prime Minister Churchill after the King's death, "and the care and thoroughness with which he mastered the immense daily flow of State papers made a deep mark on my mind."

Like his mother, Queen Mary, George VI had an astonishing capacity for gathering facts and remembering them, and from this storehouse of information was frequently able to make valuable contributions to the policies of his governments. Because of his government's constitutional set-to with the cabinet, George VI, in the early years of his reign, was careful not to venture into the twilight zone between the Crown and the government, but toward the end of the war and in the post-war years he exerted a growing influence in the area of political and internal policy.

Like his grandfather, Edward VII, whose royal diplomacy laid the mental basis for the Empire Cordiale, George VI consciously and deliberately used himself and his Royal Family to tighten the bonds that unite the free world, particularly the ties that bind Britain and the English-speaking nations of the Commonwealth and the United States.

He frequently used his personal influence to persuade British public figures to take on what appeared to be thankless assignments. For instance, it was on George VI's urging that his blue-blooded second cousin, Lord Louis Mountbatten, whose versatility and ability the King admired, agreed to take on the onerous job as the 29th and last Viceroy of India, charged with devising and implementing a solution that would meet Indian demands for independence. Mountbatten at first rejected the post when the Labor government nominated him—"No one in his right frame of mind would dream of going out to try to settle an insoluble problem," he told Prime Minister Attlee—and only accepted the assignment when George VI personally asked him to take up the challenge.

More recently, just prior to his death, the King pressed for the appointment of Viscount Montgomery as supreme commander for Communist-infested Malaya. The appointment, proposed by Churchill's cabinet and agreed to by Mountbatten, later fell through because of the short-sighted opposition of Malayan planters, who feared that an all-out campaign against the Communists, combined with a military regime which Montgomery's appointment implied, would put a temporary end to their already restricted business activities.

Sir Alan Lascelles was the King's principal secretary.

Visiting the front in France, the King chats with Gen. Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander in Europe.

Occasionally George VI exerted his influence in most unexpected directions. Just prior to D-Day for the invasion of France in 1944, Prime Minister Churchill pleaded General Eisenhower with repeated requests to be allowed to travel along as a witness to the massive operation. Eisenhower strongly demurred, in view of the extra precautions that would have been needed because of the prime minister's presence and the consequences in the unhappy event that he became a casualty. Churchill was persistent, however. At this point one of Eisenhower's aides tipped off Buckingham Palace, and George VI promptly sent word that if the prime minister felt it necessary to go on the expedition, the King felt it his equal duty and privilege to participate at the head of his troops.

LATER the King tactfully wrote Churchill saying he had decided "that it would not be right for either you or me to be where we planned to be on D-Day." Pointing out that their presence would be an embarrassment to those responsible for the fighting ship or ships on which they travelled, George VI said: "I have very reluctantly come to the conclusion that the right thing to do is what normally falls to those at the top on such occasions, namely, to remain at home and wait."

While he admitted Eisenhower's over-all command of the operation, Churchill doggedly contended that the Supreme Commander could not stop him, as Minister of Defence in Great Britain, from sailing on the invasion as a crew member of one of His Majesty's ships, and the old war-horse was all set to sail with another letter from the King overtook him. "I am not a man more than you, I am a sailor, and as King I am head of all these services," he wrote George VI. "There is nothing I would like to do better than to go to sea, but I have agreed to stay at home as it is for you to do myself. I do exactly what I should have liked to do myself."

That settled the matter. Both the King and his first minister stayed in London and visited the Normandy beaches only after the landings had been accomplished.

When he laid aside the Crown, whose unshared burden he had found too heavy to bear, the Duke of Windsor, in his farewell broadcast at the end of the abdication crisis, mended his brother, the new King, and remarked that "He has one matchless blessing, enjoyed by so many of you and not bestowed on me, a happy home with his wife and children." With this one phrase—which the Duke later revealed had been added to his manuscript by Winston Churchill—the abdicated Edward VIII underscored the reason why the majority of his subjects lamented but none the less approved his laying down the Crown.

In its time the monarchy has been variously a byword for raffishness and scandal, but during the last five reigns at least, covering the past 100 years, it has increasingly come to stand for not only the unity and continuity of the British nation and Commonwealth but also the high moral and personal and, above all, family virtues which are recognized as the necessary foundations of modern political life. Ever since the idyllic example of Queen Victoria and her Consort, Prince Albert, and their family, the idea of a family has become an integral part of the idea of monarchy, and the notion of a bachelor king—or a king

DO THEY USE DIRTY WORDS?

By Marcia Winn

Marcia Winn

THERE'S a period when every child comes home proudly mouthing the very unadorned words. Some of the words may not be smutty at all, but the child thinks they are. He loves these even more. He thinks he is being gaily wicked—well, maybe just a little wicked—and he wonders how far he can go.

Not until he sees a lifted adult eyebrow and hears the pained inquiry, "Now where did he pick up that?" does he have any idea that it might be anything but funny. To be risqué is nothing to him.

Once it is commented upon, however, it is cemented in his catch-basin little brain for life. It becomes devilish, something to sing loudly when adult guests convene, something to draw attention.

Well, what are you going to do about it? Here is your beautiful innocent whom you have been rearing so carefully. His mouth should drop rosebuds and pearls, delicately, one by one, and here he is spewing garbage as fast as he can. Grandmother had a remedy, you recall. "Wash out his mouth with kitchen soap. At once!" It might help, but it seems a drastic measure for a manifestation that is certain to pass; it might also merely help him remember the words while making him hate both you and soap.

If the language pains you sufficiently (and each home has its own standards) you can do two things. You can ignore it, knowing that society eventually may correct it, that in time your dove may realize foul language isn't socially acceptable, or you can offer a more pleasing substitute. You can indicate and show, by example, that you don't think these new words, nice as they may be to roll on a learning tongue, are really nice words. "We don't use them in our house."

Quietly set up "our house" as the nicest place in the world. Let your child have pride in it, its standards, and its rules. He doesn't have to be a prig to have gratitude, as many a mother has been, to hear the child who so bitterly protested the rule when first you outlined it say later to a playmate, "Oh, we don't say that in our house. It's against the rules!"

baseball terms where Ted Williams signed for $125,000, Stan Musial for $100,000 and Ralph Kiner recently sukked at taking a cut from $90,000 to $75,000. Surely Mantle, as No. 1 star of the world's champion Yankees, merits more than a paltry $20,000—less than is earned (so they tell us) by hockey's Maurice Richard, Gordie Howe or Ted Lind-

ay. O'Brien tells us that's the way it goes in baseball's Big Time, where a rookie is a rookie salary. Joe DiMaggio's is only $7,500 in his first season, but that's just what the highly ballhoofed Mantle got in his debut in 1951 (when he was only 19).

A Good Time Was Had By All

A three-year-old Torontonian named Jo-Anne finds that being a birthday party hostess is a rugged but rewarding privilege

Final check on her pink party dress before guests arrive is satisfactory.

HIGHLIGHT of the recent social season in Toronto was the birthday party of little Jo-Anne Grayson. Miss Grayson was three years old. Her seven guests were from the two-to-four set.

Guests arrived at the door, wearing pink shirts with very full skirts and wide white collars. They were greeted by a smiling Jo-Anne. The girls, also wearing pink in a similar style, then sat down at a table. The party was a dance duet by the two girls to a recording of the "Teddy Bear" Picnic.

Some guests were reluctant to hand over the gifts. Always gracious, Jo-Anne allowed her guests to open the presents each had brought, although some forgot which belonged to them.

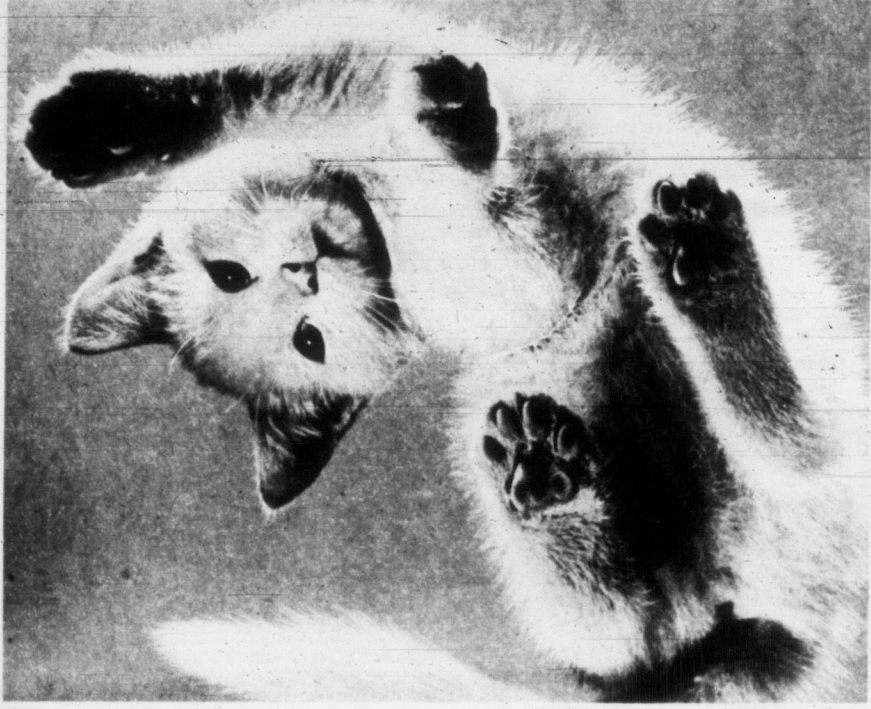

Guest Lester Post parts with his gift reluctantly as his hostess greets him. He later opened it himself.

HAVE A WORD FOR IT

... WE MEAN the magic word that tells a male to get going. It probably worked better than usual, recently, when Greek mule-drivers had to transport into the isolated interior, roofing materials needed for the construction of refugee shelters. The government purchased 2,000 tons of aluminum for the purpose — and incidentally licked the transportation problem.

Another nice thing about aluminum's lightness is that a given poundage goes two to three times as far as with other metals. It often means that aluminum, with all its advantages, actually costs less, too. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

Inside, the circulation is stimulated, helping the skin to repair and refine itself.

You can feel your skin responding Feel a wonderful smoothness come to your skin. Each night give your face this special oil-and-moisture treatment—to replace the continual robbing of your skin's freshness and softness... to cleanse it rightly, deeply.

While on holiday at Balmoral Castle, the King inspects group of Royal Canadian Air Cadets.

"The Good King"

dants bear the name of her beloved Consort, he declined to become King Albert on ascending the throne because he felt it was too closely associated in the public mind with Victoria's husband, and instead chose to be known by the last of his four Christian names, as a mark of respect for his father. He also changed his official birthday—Dec. 14—so that it could be formally celebrated by the glorious Trooping the Color ceremony in June, a better month for drawing trade and tourists to London than gloomy December.

To his relief, much court ceremony, particularly those social functions which draw reflected glory from royal sponsorship, was dispensed with during World War II and did not come back during the remainder of his reign.

BY NATURE a shy, modest, retiring man, he grew up with no desire to flaunt his royal prerogatives. When a gardener at Windsor Castle insisted on addressing him as "Your Royal Highness," young Albert turned on him one day and no more. "You can call me that once a day and no more. I am sick of it." As Duke of York he preferred to leave the limelight to his father and the Prince of Wales. Detesting poses and jumbling in any form, he ruefully confessed to a friend, "I'm just not palace-minded." On becoming King, however, he successfully mastered an endless red carpet, but his life unrolled upon an endless red carpet, showing it. After 1937 he and his family lived in a pitiless glare of publicity. He fiercely resented the intrusion in his family life—remembering the bounding he suffered from the press at the time of his own marriage, he kept photographers from bothering Princess Elizabeth and Philip on their honeymoon—but he personally learned "sucker sour" to public gawking without becoming "sucker sour."

Although the Sovereign naturally bears the heaviest burden, the symbolic role of the monarchy is diffused in secondary measure over all members of the Royal Family. Like his father before him, George VI insisted that each member of his family except the youngest grandchildren shoulder his or her share of the appearances which royalty is expected to make, and he kept a wall map in Buckingham Palace which showed by tiny colored flags where and when each visit had been made. In one three-year wartime period the wall chart showed a total of more than 3,000 public appearances, which caused the King to complain, "We are not a family; we are a firm!" Each member of the family also kept his or her own record of royal chores performed, and twice each year, at Christmas and in midsummer, the King examined the records and in return equitably shared out the major events on the program for the forthcoming six months.

Convention Clothes

Convention trains are carrying delegates to cities all across Canada and the States. The role of the wife who accompanies her husband to the event is an important one to both, and the following suggestions are prompted by letters received recently. One woman writes:

What would you suggest for train travel and what is suitable for evening entertainment in July in a city?
MRS. R. F.

TRAVEL IN SUIT

First and foremost, I suggest a suit. For train travel, the suit is valuable because it allows for a change of accessories to cope with changes in climate. Nothing looks more out of place on a train than a dress. A light tweed is a good choice, since it doesn't show the dust and is more casual. The new matchbox jacket is a good choice, and a slim skirt, lined at the seat with taffeta to prevent stretching, is an ideal complement.

COTTON DRESSES

Since the convention takes place during the hot weather, two or three dresses are needed. Cottons can be laundered by the hotel service, and I like them because they are really cool to wear. One of the new artificial fibres is a good choice, too, since they do not crush and many can be washed without ironing. For evening wear, a lace-top is good, and if the parties are formal, a short skirt is in good taste. Take along a stole.

SHORTIE COAT

Another necessity is a coat of some kind. I'd like to see you in a shortie in a light shade—take along some spot remover in the event of accidents. Some people feel a light coat is an extravagance, but the fact is that it is more attractive in the summertime. A raincoat that you can roll up in your suitcase is also an emergency measure. Have fun!

time to get up, honey? Okay-doke." He began to make peacefully scrambling movements.

Willis took a firm grip on his arm and tugged upward. Corky hurried around and began to work on the other side. Eventually, Bart was in a more or less vertical position. By that time quite a crowd had collected.

"Taxi," Wanda said. "Oh, for heaven's sake, taxi!"

The cab driver asked, "Where to, folks?" He managed to give the word "folks" a definitely original implication.

Wanda said, "Oh, dear, I'm not sure exactly where he lives."

"Well, then," Corky asked efficiently, "where do you live?"

Willis commented, "We can't just leave him in the taxi, you know."

Bart was curled snugly at their feet. If he was uncomfortable, he didn't know it.

The driver said, "You can say that again." Wanda gave him her address.

THE ride was a short one. Once Corky murmured sadly, "Boy, did I show you the ropes!" Willis gave her a long, contemplative look and then patted her hand.

Wanda said, "What? What did you say?" So Willis patted her hand, too.

It took the combined efforts of Willis and the cab driver to get Bart out of the taxi, through the apartment-house lobby, into the elevator, and on to the couch in Wanda's sleek little library. It also cost Willis a thin sheaf of folding money.

While he was proffering this, Wanda said sweetly, "As long as a taxi is right here anyway, dear, and it's so awfully late, I imagine Miss Andrews would prefer to just run along."

Willis looked at Corky. "Would you? Of course, if you'd rather—would you?"

"Oh," Corky answered, looking back at him. "Not particularly."

The cabman eyed his loot, said, "Good-night, folks," and vanished.

Wanda tucked her arm through Willis's and crooned, "Come on in here and be comfy. I'll fix us a drink." Her voice flattened. "Coming, Miss Andrews?"

"Well," said Corky, "since you insist," Wanda patted the cushions of an enormous, underslung divan in a sitting room the size of a football field. "Do sit here, Willis. I'll get some music." She opened the front of a nearby cabinet and twisted dials. A symphony orchestra began to play.

Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata, lovingly and curiously, Wanda turned and gave Willis a smile that matched it. Corky wandered to a chair and sat down.

Wanda turned off three large lamps and turned on two small ones, in far corners. The room acquired a pinkish glow and thick, lush shadows.

"There," Even her voice was soft and pinkish. "Corky, darling? I'll get our drinks."

Corky counted the lamps. The record player poured out its flood of musical saccharin. Corky counted the tables. Then she looked at Willis. To her astonishment, Willis was looking at her. He grinned.

"Champagne," he retorted softly. "You give them champagne. And moonlight and sweet music."

Corky said, "Huh?"

Wanda floated in, carrying a silver tray with an ice bucket containing a tall bottle, and three glasses. She stopped in front of Willis.

"Champagne," she said.

Willis looked at Corky again. His lips formed the word, "See?"

WANDA put the tray on a table and began to fuss prettily with it. She moved each glass half an inch or so. She turned the wine bottle around and around.

Then she said, "Willis, dear, about that luncheon today. I'm not, dear, about that I had to rush away, when I left loved—really loved—every minute of it."

Willis a long glance. "Do you understand, dear?"

Willis opened his mouth like a goldfish at feeding time.

Corky said, "This is where I came in." She made a bee-line for the door and jerked it open.

They walked along the boulevard. The moon was thin and white as though it were peeking around the edge of something.

Corky said, "You didn't need to come. I could have taken a cab. I—I think she was about to accept you."

"Accept nothing," said Willis modestly. "I think she was about to propose! Soft lights, sweet music, wine. Everything you listed. Except the orchids. You've got them."

Corky said, "Aw, nuts."

They strolled about a block more. Then Willis said, "Just a minute. Here." When Corky turned toward him, he removed the orchids from her shoulder. He tossed them into the middle of the street.

"There," he told her. "No orchids." He pointed skyward. "Practically no moon. No soft music, no wine. No tricks at all." He reached into an inner pocket and withdrew a white envelope. He asked solemnly, "Would you care to check my references?"

Corky stared at him. After a long while, she said, "I've already seen them." She moved much too close. "Remember?"

The cop on the beat put one large hand on Willis's shoulder and one on Corky's and separated them.

"Haven't you two got any place to go?" he growled. "You can't make love right here on the street."

Corky gave him a smile that rocked him back on his heels.

"Oh, we're not making love," she told him confidentially. "We're just practising. Just in case."

with a thrice-married wife—seems to the British to smack of the musical comedy or Hollywood conception of monarchy.

The British are essentially a homey people, and nothing rejoices them more than to see their own ideal of family life realized in the monarchy. The Royal Family is thus a cross-section of the nation, in which flattered millions see reflected facets of their own lives. That is why in countless homes, in Britain and in the Commonwealth, both rich and poor, the milestones of family life—the great events of births and marriages and deaths—are marked off in relation to the public and private doings of the Royal Family.

Paraphrasing, it is equally noteworthy that the Royal Family today is thought of throughout Britain as a family and not as a dynasty. This explains why the great personal occasions in the Royal Family's life, such as the silver wedding anniversary of George VI and Queen Elizabeth in 1948 and the birth of a son and heir to Princess Elizabeth the same year, are regarded as truly national events, and not, as in the old days of royalty, as of first and foremost importance to the dynasty.

In their own reign, King George VI and his Queen, who shared her husband's qualities of dignified simplicity and quiet devotion to duty, provided in their own happy married life and wise upbringing of their two daughters a visible example of domesticity which served, to a surprising extent, as a model for their subjects. Churchill, with his talent for epitomizing, once said of them, "They have the rare talent of being able to make a mass of people realize, in a flash, that they are good."

THIS symbolic function, the third of the Sovereign's jobs, involving as it does a monotonous round of public appearances and an almost complete lack of privacy in the lives of royal personages, is in many ways the most onerous of the monarch's roles. George VI found it the most trying of his triple functions, but he worked hard at it and gradually subordinated his own personality in the symbol of the Sovereign. He even changed his Christian name on taking the throne. Named Albert to please his great-grandmother, who requested that all her male descend— (Continued on Page 40)

CLOSING IN ON CANCER

Canadian researchers are studying the very beginnings of life in their attempts to conquer the dread disease

By Jacqueline Moore

WEEKEND STAFF WRITER

IN LABORATORY and treatment centres across Canada scientists are stalking one of mankind's deadliest enemies—the malignant disease known to us as cancer. Our researchers are hunting their treacherous prey with the rays from radioactive cobalt and radium, with surgical knives, viruses, sex hormones and laboratory search Canada.

It's the most exciting and ambitious search his country has ever known. We are closer than ever before to the right answers to the cancer mystery.

In London, Ont., and Saskatoon, Sask., the world's first cobalt bombs went into action against cancer. In 1951, giving Canadian doctors a new and powerful radiation weapon that can pinpoint the cancer from a yard away. Another cobalt bomb has been installed at the B.C. Cancer Institute in Vancouver.

As we edge closer to the killer that takes the lives of some 16,000 Canadians every year, the trail is leading us back to the beginnings of life—back to what goes on in a single living cell. For when we understand why cells behave the way they do, what makes them live and what makes them die, we will have conquered the enemy, because we will be able to control him.

In the old Henry Morgan house on Montreal's University Street, a trained team of 32 researchers is engaged in studying some of the fundamental mysteries of cellular life. Their director is a sprightly, enthusiastic English biochemist named Dr. J. H. Quastel, who is a Fellow of the Royal Society of England. Dr. Quastel, now 52, is famed for the role he played in England's wartime work on soil productivity. From that work came the powerful weed killer 2-4-D and Krihnum, a well-known organic substance that "loosens" heavy soils to increase their productivity.

As director of the Montreal General Hospital's Research Institute and professor of biochemistry at McGill University, Dr. Quastel is the chief of an active investigation centre and a busy teacher. In the five years since the institute opened, its staff members have published 42 scientific papers on their special projects.

All this biochemical activity is paid for by grants from several scientific foundations, among them the National Cancer Institute of Canada, which gives the Research Institute $30,000 a year, or about one-third of the money it needs.

Dr. Quastel is one of 70 scientists who receive grants from the Cancer Institute, which invests $400,000 a year in research and fellowships at 13 university and medical centres across the country. The Canadian Cancer Society is affiliated with the Cancer Institute and contributes approximately half the institute's income.

"We are attacking cancer," says Dr. Quastel, "by studying the chemical mechanisms operating both in the normal and in the diseased living cell. Our objective is to discover a chemical way to control the growth of a tumor cell and yet not seriously damage the normal, healthy cell."

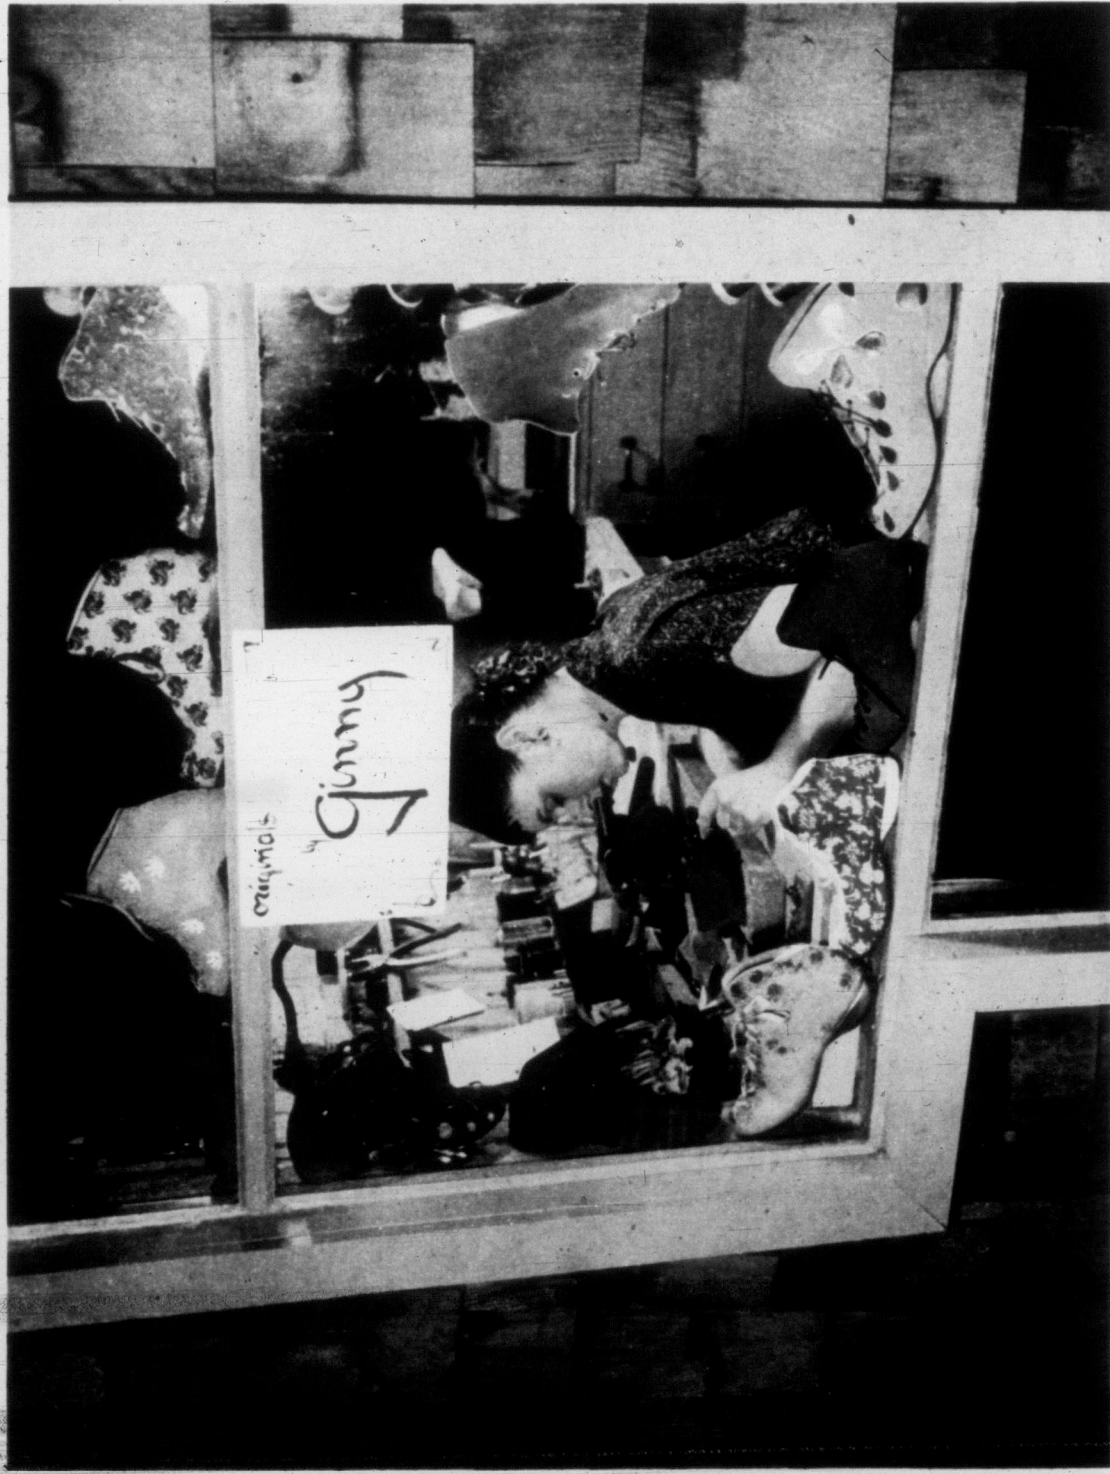

Dr. Quastel and his researchers are trying to do by chemical means what the cobalt bomb is aiming at in another way. But a successful chemical weapon would be infinitely more effective, since it would operate at the site of the cancer.

Most scientists agree that the biggest hope of discovering the cause of cancer lies in a chemical approach on the level of the living cell.

IMAGINE that your body is the world and that it is composed of many different kinds of peoples—or cells. The cells of your body, like the peoples of the earth, are organized in interdependent societies. They obey the rules formulated by the community of nations. But once in a while a society turns traitor. It decides it will no longer co-operate with the rest of the world and refuses to obey its laws. It then embarks on a program of expansion, gobbling up surrounding territories with a view to conquering the world and enforcing its own ideas of growth on other societies.

When this happens in the body, the rebel cells multiply rapidly as they set out on their voyage of conquest. They are called "neoplasms," or tumors. "We are still far from understanding why tumors develop and how they originate," says Dr. Quastel. "But we do know a great deal about their activities."

It is from the study of the activities of both normal and abnormal tissue that researchers hope to gain chemical control of cancer. (Continued on Page 35)

Ginny turns out these hand-made shoes called "Ginnys" in a room of her Hollywood home. Screen stars pay from $15 to $50 a pair for them.

THE COBBLER IS A LADY

Ginny Brown makes shoes that are both glamorous and comfortable for Hollywood actresses

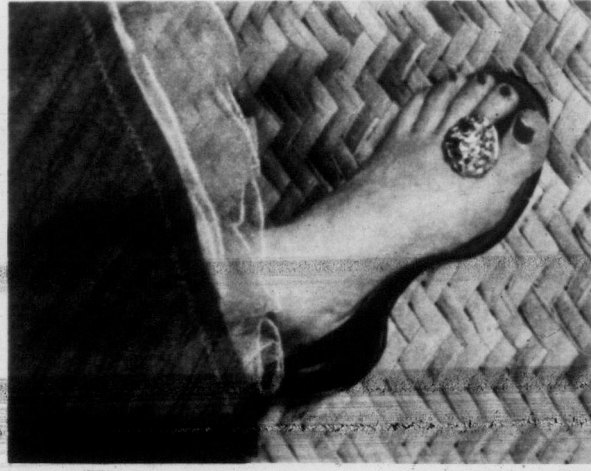

GINNY BROWN is a Hollywood shoemaker who got into the business by the stage door. She had always wanted to be an actress, but had had opportunity to take only a few walk-on parts and to do a little scene painting and costume designing. One day she was asked to make all the costumes, including shoes, for a production of Volpone.

"I'd never made a pair of shoes before," says Ginny.

A sling-strap sandal is held on the foot by a stud, between the toes, on which various buttons or jewels can be placed.

Ginny's drawing-board sketch of shoes for Shelley Winters is made with the actual materials that will be used for them.

stead, he just said, "You'll be paid overtime, of course." The thought of Wanda Fraser being jealous of his snub-nosed, freckle-faced secretary was so ridiculous that he scarcely noticed the slam of the door behind said secretary.

Corky finally drifted into the neat little lobby of the neat little business women's hotel where Willis was waiting for her. Drifted. Not ran or scurried or ambled. And he had waited quite a while, almost as long as he usually waited for Wanda. But that was different. Wanda's cream-and-ebony perfection would naturally require care and painstaking, while Corky—

The freckles were gone. He saw that next. And her hair was not the color of a pumpkin. An autumn leaf, rather. Or his mother's fine old gold watch. He blinked. It was like discovering that the digitized kid next door has become a young lady. Except that it seemed somehow indecent for her to have done it in approximately four hours.

She said, "Don't stare. That's rule number one."

Willis thrust a box at her. "Here."

Corky said, "Orchids! How darling!"

"Well, that's what you said. Practise, you know."

Corky said, "Oh."

Willis decided that Technicolor movie scenes of night clubs are not exaggerated. When he stood at the top of the Maraca's broad, velvet-carpeted stairway and waited for the cat-suit approach of the head waiter, Corky had to again remind him, while she clung to his arm, not to stare.

Willis tried to look nonchalant. "Don't cling," he murmured back, slightly confused but still his own man. "Suppose Wanda—"

"What am I here for? Fun?"

"To practise—"

But the head waiter was beckoning discreetly. Corky unclung and followed him down the steps. Willis gave a sigh of relief and tagged along. Then suddenly he heard a voice.

"Why, Willis!" It was Wanda, sitting at a table almost directly in his path.

Willis forgot all about Corky and the head waiter and stopped short. He grinned broadly and said, "Hi, Wanda."

A heavy, blond young man made his presence obvious by rising to his feet, so Willis added, "Bart," and held out his hand. Bart grabbed for it, pumped it briefly, and sat back down where he evidently expected the chair to be. It wasn't.

Wanda snapped, "Oh, Bart! Good heavens!"

Bart's eyes, which were generously tinted with red, came just above the edge of the table.

He said, "Ya tripped me, ya little rascal. Now whadja wanna do that for?" Wagging his head playfully, he began to scramble to his feet.

Wanda said, "Oh, for Pete's sake!"

Corky said, "Pardon me."

"Oh, Corky," Willis stared at her for a moment. Then he remembered. "Oh, Miss Andrews, Miss Fraser, Mr. Huntington."

Bart made it to his feet. "Delighted," he said. "Delighted."

Eying the orchids, Wanda said thoughtfully, "Miss—uh—Andrews?"

Corky smiled and nodded. Wanda's jaw snapped shut.

"Waiter!" Bart called. "Waiter! Lesh have a couple more chairs here."

Corky appeared. Bart said, "Allow me," and seated next table squealed.

Then he seated himself. Almost. A blonde at the next table squealed.

Bart sat stiffly upright on the floor. He glared.

"See here, folks," he said sternly, "who is think you're shoving around?"

Willis blinked. Then he said, "Nobody shoved you. You just fell you drunken lug."

Bart clutched the edge of the table and rose to his feet. He thrust his face to within an inch of Willis.

"Shut up," he snarled, "when you shay that."

Bart growled, "Why, you—," and swung at him with poor timing.

Willis ducked, said, "Oh, all right," and clipped him neatly on the chin. The blonde squealed again. Bart went down with a well-padded thud and his head snuggled cozily against her feet. Chased forward and voices babbled.

Two large waiters rushed forward.

Willis stared wildly into the pandemonium. Then he yelled, "Corky! Corky!"

The two waiters closed in.

STANDING just inside the edge of the canopy over the entrance, in the full, garish light of the green neon sign that read, "Club Maraca," Wanda stamped her foot.

"Take me home!" she demanded. She moved a possessive step nearer Willis.

Willis jerked at his lapels, brushed first one arm and then the other, and said vaguely, "Why, sure."

"No, wait," said Corky. "Wait just a minute. Oh, here he is now."

There was a scuffling sound inside the closed door. The doorman pulled it hurriedly open and Bart came out, or rather, shot out. He sat spread-legged on the sidewalk. His head dropped forward on his chest and he began to snore gently.

"There," Corky said. "I knew he'd be along."

The doorman watched with an expression that was a skillful blend of caution, aggression and amusement. Willis eyed him and decided he was at least seven feet tall. So he walked over and slapped Bart's face.

Bart said, "Ish it."

BECAUSE the sunshine struck a jarring note on the gloom in his soul, Willis P. Wilkerson III closed the venetian blinds. Then he sank into the leather chair behind his desk. He was a long, well-knit young man with a law degree, a stubborn cowl, conservative tastes, and practically moribund instincts.

He tapped his head heavily on one hand, picked up a pencil and began to doodle little blobs on the blotting pad. The door opened.

Miss Cornelia Andrews, his secretary, crossed the room and placed the afternoon mail before him. Then she stood still. Willis drew a blob that was thicker and blacker than the rest.

Corky Andrews said pleasantly, "The babe turned you down, huh?"

Willis looked up. His secretary had everything he disdained in a woman, including freckles and pumpkin-colored hair. It was unfortunate, he often reflected, that she also had brains and that capable secretaries are about as commonplace as hens' teeth.

"How," he asked sternly, "did you know?"

Corky stuffed her hands into her tweedy pockets and grinned companionably. "I'm your secretary, she said, 'your nine-to-five self. Remember?"

Willis remembered. He also frowned. He waited. Corky spread her hands eloquently and her eyes sparkled at him. "How could I miss it? I'd be a dope. New tie, new shoes, fresh haircut. Heaven-is-my-deadly gleam. Before lunch, that is. After lunch, gloom. Thick, black gloom."

Willis remarked coldly, "Your attention to details is commendable."

Corky let her hands drop. "Look, Mr. Wilkerson. I'm sorry. Honestly, I am. But you shouldn't let it get you down. After all, you can always ask her again."

If there was one thing Willis Wilkerson III needed at that moment it was sympathy, a friendly shoulder on which to shed his frustration and heartbreak.

Closing in on Cancer

The team working under Dr. Quastel is in the midst of an important piece of research that is directly related to cancer control.

One of the significant things about tumors is that they obtain their energy for growth largely by utilizing the sugar that they get from the blood. In this they differ from the great majority of normal healthy tissues that get their energy not only from sugar but by burning up a variety of food products.

To translate sugar into energy, cells must use a chemical substance called ATP. Dr. Quastel, working with Dr. Antonio Cantero of the Montreal Cancer Institute, Notre Dame Hospital, wondered if it would be possible to prevent the tumor cells from using their ATP to turn sugar into energy. They looked for a substance that would divert ATP's action in the tumor cells but would not disturb the requirements of healthy cells.

Back in 1949, Dr. Quastel and Dr. Rochester Harpur had experimented with glucoseamine, a substance that is closely related to sugar. They were not thinking in terms of cancer. They simply wanted to see how glucoseamine would behave in normal cells.

Now, Dr. Quastel remembered that action. Now he had interfered with the action of ATP in the healthy cells. If glucoseamine were handed to tumor cells in relatively large amounts, the ATP might be prevented from playing its normal role in creating energy for the tumors to grow.

DR. QUASTEL and Dr. Cantero experimented with mice which had cancer to see if an injection of glucosamine would affect them. The results were encouraging. The glucosamine injections considerably slowed the development of the particular type of cancer from which the mice suffered. The average survival time for the mice with cancer was between 30 and 40 days. But mice treated with glucosamine lived between 70 and 80 days — and some lived to 100 days, more than double the survival rate for the untreated group.

The glucosamine seemed to bring about a breakdown of the tumor cells without having any adverse effect on a normal animal.

"It is far too early yet to say whether glucosamine or substances derived from it will have any curative effects on other cancers beside the one we treated," says Dr. Quastel. "And we haven't got the slightest idea whether it will have any effect in human beings. The results do show, however, that it is possible a substance normally found in the body, like glucosamine, may play a role in the control of cancer. Glucosamine is important because since it appears to be non-toxic, though many more experiments will have to be carried out before we know this for sure.

"We have several irons in the fire," he says, "and we keep on hoping one of them will be really hot."

THEY are tackling the problem of carcinogens, those chemical substances that are known to produce cancer. "We want to find out how the carcinogens operate," says Dr. Quastel. "And we are using soil to obtain micro-organisms that might break down these cancer-producing substances." The scientists are studying the effects on cells of a substance called urethane which produces lung cancer.

They are working on brain tumors to see how their chemical behavior differs from the normal.

They are engaged in a process of virus multiplication which is important for all virus diseases, as well as cancer, because in certain types of cancer, it is suspected that a virus plays a role.

They are examining the action of several drugs and antibiotics to see how they affect the chemical processes of the cell.

They are trying to throw further light on the chemical control of cell growth.

They are using radioactive techniques to follow the breakdown of minute quantities of the chemicals with which they work.

They have developed a chromatographic technique, a new and relatively inexpensive way of examining blood to help diagnose diseases that affect the distribution of proteins in blood plasma. The prepared plasma is smeared on treated filter paper where it leaves individualistic patterns—or chromatograms— that vary according to the diseases. And cancer is one of these diseases. Both the Children's Memorial Hospital and the Montreal Neurological Institute, as well as other Montreal hospitals, are co-operating with the Research Institute in the chromatographic project.

...We will continue to look for the right answers," says Dr. Quastel, "although finding money is as difficult for us as it is for most research centres. No part of the cost of equipping or operating the Institute has come out of Montreal General Hospital funds. We depend solely on grants, donations from friends and scholarships given to our post-graduate students who are working for their Ph.D.s at McGill."

PITTSBURGH SUN-PROOF HOUSE PAINT defeats the common enemies of the white house

Here's the paint that will keep your home gleaming white for years to come. It defeats the common enemies of the white house—dust stains, industrial fumes and climatic changes.

And when it rains, your house gets a brand new finish. You see, all white paints "chalk." The difference in Pittsburgh Sun-Proof Paint is that chalking is controlled—the pigments chalk slowly and evenly. And when the rain washes off these chalked pigments, it leaves a new, smooth paint surface free of all dirt and dust. Pigment selection, too, is important in this self-cleaning process. Certain of these special pigments react with paint oils to form soaps, which help the rain wash the surface clean.

Even after 36 months of exposure, your house will still look newly painted. Actually, it will have a surface that's only as old as the last rainy day!

We said that Pittsburgh Sun-Proof is impervious to industrial smoke and fumes. This is especially important to those who live in or near industrial areas. Sulphur fumes and gases in the atmosphere will discolor ordinary lead-base paint. But Pittsburgh Sun-Proof contains Triaminum, not lead, and does not react with industrial gases or fumes.

Finally, Pittsburgh Sun-Proof is enriched with "Vitolized Oils." While ordinary paints eventually crack and peel, Pittsburgh Sun-Proof stays elastic because these oils preserve the paint film even under severe climatic changes.

Why not ask your Pittsburgh Paint Dealer or Painter to tell you the whole story? He can show you how Pittsburgh Sun-Proof saves you money over the years in paint and repair bills. You'll find his name in the yellow pages of your telephone directory.

Andy O'Brien Says

Thanks to Dad. Mantle at 21 looms as...

GREATEST SINCE RUTH

MICKEY MANTLE shrugged at my question. "Now, there's no freak skill about clouting 'em from both sides of the plate," he said. "If every kid now starting to play baseball was forced—as I was by my father—to change over according to the pitcher, at least 80 per cent of the pro rookies 15 years from now would be switch-hitters like me."

That, of course, was a modest exaggeration. "Like me" in this case refers to the most exciting baseball personality to rise since the sports pages first began paying headline attention to a slugging Boston Red Sox pitcher named Babe Ruth back in 1914. At an early

Oct. 20, Mickey is not only established as a world's champion New York Yankees star of breath-taking brilliance, but also appears to be barely on the threshold of a career possibly unmatched in the history of baseball's Big Time. Branch Rickey has wrapped it up in one sentence: "Mantle may make us forget every ball player we have ever seen."

We were talking beside the batting cage at Miami Stadium just prior to an exhibition game against Brooklyn Dodgers. Batting from his natural side (he is right-handed), Mantle delighted the early birds by dropping two balls over the left centre fence at the 380-foot mark. An hour or so later, he came up to bat against a fireball right-hander, Ed Roebuck, then up for trial from Montreal Royals, and took his stance on the left side—his "wrong" side. He leaned into the very first Dodger throw to homer over the exact same 380-foot, left field mark.

Last year, he belted 23 homers—12 from the right side and 11 from the left. His 37 doubles and seven triples were also fairly evenly distributed between both sides of the plate. Not once while compiling his seasonal .311 batting percentage or later while amassing his terrific 345 World Series average did he favor his natural side.

"Most people think I'm ambidextrous," he told me. "yet I can't even handle a soup spoon with my left. But I feel just as at home on either side of the plate."

Dr. Hass holds a halibut, or guitar-fish, which he captured with his bare hands near Om Crush atoll.

HANS HASS, a Viennese deep-sea diver, is as much at home on the bottom of the ocean as most people are on dry land. In 1939, with two college companions from the University of Vienna, he spent eight months exploring coral reefs in the Caribbean, using equipment he designed himself. He had hoped to go on a major expedition to Polynesia at the end of the war, but the Russians seized his ship with all its special equipment.

So Dr. Hass started all over again from the beginning. He turned up all alone in Port Sudan in 1949, with only the bare essentials to explore the unknown depths of the Red Sea. What happened to him is told in his book, Manta: Under The Red Sea With Spear and Camera, to be published next month.

This was Hans Hass's first meeting with the manta birostris, a species of ray fish that is shaped like an enormous bat. A blow from its tail or its flipper can break a man's back, yet Hass dived into a school of 40 of these monsters and stayed among them for two hours to get the amazing photographs on these pages.

Hans Hass encountered hundreds of other sea creatures along the coral reefs of the Red Sea. He explored the mysterious formations of the world's warmest body of water and became an intimate observer of the fantastic fish which inhabit the sea. Some are strangely beautiful, others are killers, like the deadly barracuda and the vicious shark. But Dr. Hass managed, by the narrowest of margins, to survive these underwater dangers. And from his Red Sea adventure he made enough money to outfit a new ship for a second expedition to the area, this time with a crew that included his beautiful young secretary, Lotte, who is now Mrs. Hass. The movie, Under The Red Sea, that Hass filmed on that second trip, won an international first prize at the 1951 Film Festival in Venice.

At the moment, Dr. and Mrs. Hass are in their Alpine home in the tiny country of Liechtenstein, making plans for another expedition this summer. This trip will be made aboard their newly-outfitted laboratory ship, the Xawfa, which was formerly one of the famous Sir Thomas Lipton's yachts.

Dolls Reflect History

WHEN Mrs. Harvey B. Evel stages an exhibition of some of her 2,000 dolls, as she is doing this week at Grace Anglican Church, Hamilton, Ont., it's almost certain at least one tough-looking little schoolboy will look around disgustedly, and pipe up:

"Where's the old lady who plays with dolls?"

Like most doll collectors, Mrs. Evel is accustomed to having people wonder, sometimes out loud, if her hobby is a form of arrested development.

Many of us associate happy memories of childhood with some favorite rag doll or teddy bear, long since buried in the attic. But dolls have a history much more significant than the play of children.

The story of dolls is the story of mankind. "Unhatched" of ancient Egypt, placed in the tomb to act as servants for the dead noble when he reawakened. This was possibly a modification of the earlier custom of slaying the actual servants themselves.

Similarly, it used to be customary in the South Sea Islands to bury a live baby in the foundations of any building of importance. Later, in Europe, such figures were turned up in the foundations of old buildings.

The crude early dolls of man were usually "rattles," as the sound of rattles or clappers was supposed to frighten away evil spirits. Gradually dolls became symbols of man's hopes and fears. There were rain and lightning dolls, fertility dolls, harvest dolls and dolls of war. The good-luck "geopie" doll, dangling from the windshield of today's car, is a dim reflection of a primitive savage, kneeling to place food, drink and gifts in front of images of his protective gods.

Dolls were made of clay, china, wax, wood, rag, stone, sponge, sea shells. They were made of corn cobs, nuts and dried apples. In England they were made of edible gingerbread. In the shape of saints. The person who ate these on feast days was supposed to partake of some of the saint's good qualities.

At one time girls used to make portraits of dolls in wax, in the image of their beloved, and then toss the doll into the flames of a fire.

Their idea was that the unknown man would melt with love for them, as his image did in the flames.

In a like hope, the Japanese used to visit all manner of mutilations and diseases on portrait dolls of their relatives and loved ones. Burning these was supposed to protect the humans from the same misfortunes.

Entirely opposite in purpose were the voodoo dolls, stuck with pins to bring pain and injury to an enemy.

Still fairly common are examples of Chinese "doctor" dolls, carved in bone or ivory. A Chinese woman in pain would point out on the naked anatomy of the doll the part of her body which was troubling her, as modesty forbade her describing it.

In Europe in the 14th Century, dolls became portraiture of fashion. In 1391 the King of France sent a collection of dolls to the Queen of England. Their clothes were copies of the new styles his wife, Isabella of Bavaria, had introduced to his court. In the 19th Century the Empress Eugenie had dolls made in her own image, with exact copies of her magnificent dresses.

In recent times, dolls have slowly changed from representing man's gods, to representing man himself. Dolls have learned to raise their hands, to sleep, walk, talk, cry and sing. And now, of course, we have the dolls whose diapers need changing.

Mrs. Evel's efforts in this direction seem to have reached their natural culmination in Colliod's tale of Pinocchio, the doll who became a real, live boy.

Because of the early religious significance of dolls, it used to be believed that the word "doll" stemmed from the word "idol," reaching us from the Greek, "eidolon," and the Latin "idolum."

Another possible derivation of the word is the old English use of "Doll" as a form of the name Dorothy. It was also sometimes applied to women of doubtful character. In Hampshire "doll" is the name applied to the smallest pig in a litter.

MRS. EVEL first became interested in helping New Canadians in her home town of Hamilton, the taught sewing classes at Presbyterian Church, which was run by the Leaf Club, at Hamilton's Y.W.C.A., where girls from a dozen different European countries learned sewing, embroidery and did folk dancing. The native costumes fascinated Mrs. Evel and she began to make and collect dolls in the authentic attire of different countries. Today she has more than 2,000 such dolls, representing nearly every country in the world. The average value of her dolls is around $10 or $15, but some are worth more.

For various church and service organizations, Mrs. Evel, with the help of a friend, Mrs. R. C. Furness, lectures and puts on exhibitions of parts of her collection. Making up the tiny settings and backgrounds to display the dolls appropriately is no small part of this task.

Children are fascinated by this easy and pleasant introduction to history and often stump the exhibitors with their surprising questions.

"In order to have the answers," says Mrs. Evel, "we've had to go back to school ourselves."

Wax dolls Mrs. Evel shows are 100 years old. Human hair was set in their scalps one hair at a time.

LIVEST GHOST AFLOAT

For 35 years his mother thought him dead, but Carleton Haycock was busy living a hazardous life

By Cyril Robinson
WEEKEND Staff Writer

Haycock, engineer on a tanker, is a Nova Scotian who has survived everything from bullets to a broken neck.

CARLETON AUGUSTUS WINCHESTER, HAYCOCK, 53, a battle-scarred veteran of two world wars, is probably the liveliest ghost afloat.

Believed by his family to have been killed in action at Passchendaele in October, 1917, the rugged, 200-pound Nova Scotian turned up safe and sound recently as fourth engineer in the tanker Imperial Toronto.

During the 35 years since his "death," Haycock lived an adventurous life. In sundry mishaps ashore and afloat, the adroitly gray-haired seaman sustained such assorted injuries as bullet-riddled legs, a smashed foot, a broken arm, severe frostbite, a dislocated shoulder, numerous broken ribs, a variety of body bruises, and a broken neck which he will likely have for the rest of his days because of the danger of an operation.

A shipmate, noting Haycock's love of cats, once observed dryly, "It's understandable. They both have nine lives."

Recently, a half-brother, Archie Hayward, of Jonesport, Me., arrived in Westport, N.S., to look for Haycock's grave. When he asked the village storekeeper to direct him to the cemetery, the storekeeper told him that Haycock was very much alive.

Subsequent investigations led to a happy reunion at Jonesport with Haycock, his 73-year-old mother and other members of her family. "I didn't know my mother was alive," he said, the seaman said. "It was the biggest thrill of my life."

This tangle resulted from a storm in 1903 which claimed the life of William Winchester, a Bluenose fisherman. He left a widow and two children, Florence, six, and Carleton, three. Ill and unable to support two children, Mrs. Winchester placed her son for adoption with an agency. He was adopted by Capt. and Mrs. Gus Haycock of Digby, N.S. They raised him as their child. In Digby and Westport, and he never learned his true identity.

At 15, young Haycock added three years to his age and joined the 64th Battalion. After eight months basic training, he transferred to the 88th Highlanders and sailed overseas in October, 1916. In October, 1917, Pte. Carleton Haycock was wounded in action at Passchendaele. "We really got cut up. Only 150 survived from our battalion of 900," he recalled.

Suffering from machine-gun wounds in both legs, the young soldier played dead until nightfall and then crawled to a first-aid station behind his own lines. Through an error, the government notified his foster parents that he was missing in action. The mistake was discovered and, a month later, the earlier report was corrected. Meanwhile, Haycock's real mother, who had been informed by Mrs. Haycock of the first report, moved to the United States and remarried. She was unaware that the erroneous report had been contradicted.

AFTER seven months in hospital, Haycock returned home. As Capt. Haycock had died during the war period and, as far as Carleton knew, Mrs. Haycock was his only living relative. When she died in January, 1945, he believed he was an orphan.

Following his discharge, Haycock worked on the construction of a dam for the Nova Scotia Power Commission. But his war injuries left him less nimble on his feet. One day a huge hemlock piling fell toward him and he couldn't move fast enough. He sustained a smashed foot. Just out of hospital, he was alighting from a Halifax street car when it lurched. Trying to save himself, he broke his left arm when he hit the street.

The hit followed him after he joined the marine service of the Imperial Oil Co. in October, 1923. His legs, which still bear evidence of his war wounds, still weren't back to par. On shore leave early in his seafaring career, he turned up a dark alley one night, fell into an open pit and dislocated his shoulder. Later, while serving in the Montserrat, someone left off a plate in the pump room, exposing an eight-foot hole. Haycock found it the hard way and suffered several broken ribs.

The legend that he is virtually indestructible stems from these mishaps and the fact that he survived three tanker collisions and a torpedoing. The worst of the collisions occurred three years ago at the River Plate when the Imperial Quebec and another tanker crashed in a fog. Fortunately, a smoldering fire aboard the Quebec was quickly brought under control and only one crew member was badly

$25,000 Target in Drive to Thwart Killer

Conquer Cancer Campaign for 1953, with an objective of $25,000 for Greater Victoria, will begin Monday.

The campaign is actually a joint effort of the Canadian Cancer Society, which carries the load of public education and research, and the B.C. Cancer Foundation, which makes actual treatment possible.

"Cancer is Canada's Public Health Enemy No. 2," F. E. Winslow, OBE, chairman of the campaign committee, said today in announcing the drive. "It can strike anyone, anywhere, at any time. Statistics show that each three minutes someone dies of cancer, and few families escape contact with this dread disease.

"Each year across Canada and the United States, April is dedicated to collecting funds to fight cancer. The people who actually do the fighting, the doctors and scientists, need everyone's support. Cancer must be beaten, and can be beaten."

"We have here the Victoria Cancer Clinic, ably staffed and with modern equipment. Over 7,000 treatments were given during the past 12 months, and each month larger numbers of new patients are referred to the clinic for diagnosis and treatment. The clinic needs the help of everyone to improve its service to our community.

"We open our campaign in Victoria Monday, and earnestly solicit the generous support of everyone in this vital public cause."

"The fight against cancer is everybody's business." Campaign headquarters this year is in the Black Ball Ferry Building, 816 Wharf Street. Donations may be sent to the campaign at that address or taken in person. They are deductible for income tax purposes.

Money turned over to the Cancer Foundation is used directly in providing facilities for treatment. The society, on the other hand, keeps up a constant program pointing out the need for early diagnosis and the improved chances for recovery that it makes possible.

The society also supplies funds for patients needing financial assistance during their treatment.

House-Wreck Victims Safe In New Home

The Navy did a shrewd rescue job today.

Mrs. E. Burns and her two children, left amid the wreckage when their Gore Street home toppled off its foundations Friday, were moved to a new and spacious house in the Belmont naval housing project early today.

Mrs. Burns' husband is serving in HMCS Athabaskan in Korean waters. Her sister, Mrs. S. Mortimer, who lives with her, has a husband in HMCS Crusader, also in the Far East.

When the house slipped off its foundations, tumbling the chimney and veranda, planks and gutters into the yard, Mrs. Burns' youngest child was buried in the debris. But 12-month-old Stephen was unhurt. His four-year-old sister Sandra, playing close by, also escaped.

Both the Navy wife and children were excited today and grateful for the many offers sent them to share homes.

The 60-year-old Gore Street house was so badly damaged a wrecking crew had to clear doorways before moving furniture.

$45,000 Contract Let for Block on Robert House Site

Contract for construction of a store block on the Douglas Street site of the former Prince Robert House sailors' hostel has been awarded to Farmer Construction Ltd., at an estimated cost of $45,000.

Architect John A. DiCastri reports construction work will be started immediately.

A one-story building of brick and concrete will occupy the corner location adjoining St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. It will contain four stores.

The property was purchased from the city by a group of local business men, headed by Charles Dale.

The Farmer contract does not include plumbing, heating and electric contracts, which will bring the cost of the project to more than $50,000.

Cigarette vendors approved for Pubs.

Cigarette vending machines will be allowed in B.C. beer parlors, under an order-in-council approved by the cabinet this week.

Licensed premises intending to install such machines, however, must put one at each side of their establishments—one in the men's section and one in the section for ladies with escorts.

Two children hurt in city accident.

Two children suffered minor hurts in a crash Friday afternoon in which two cars were heavily damaged at View and Vancouver Streets.

Treated at Royal Jubilee Hospital and then released were Martin Fennell, 2½, and his sister, Bonny, 5½, of 3174 Alder. Police said they were in a car driven by Jean Mary Fennell which was in collision with one driven by Malcolm N. Preston, 1406 Glanford.

Officer Supported In Hold-Up Action

Constable Alone When Robbery Alarm Given

Constable Richard Loper of the Oak Bay police came within seconds of intercepting the three gun-carrying bandits who robbed the branch Bank of Commerce Friday afternoon.

He was alone on duty in the police office at approximately 1.15 p.m. when he saw, through the window, a man running across Oak Bay Avenue.

"I went to the door and he yelled: 'There's a hold-up at the bank ... or I think there is,' the policeman told the Times. His informant, as it later developed, was Fred Dann, 2346 Cookman.

The policeman was unarmed. He ran back into the station office, grabbed his gun and belt, snatched the radio to alert Oak Bay prowler officers on the road and surrounding municipalities.

He then went on the run for the Bank of Commerce, just across the street.

"But I missed them by a hair," he said.

Chief of Police Hugh Reston explained the radio alarm had brought all Greater Victoria police forces into the operation to thwart or capture the bandits.

He considered Constable Loper's actions "sensible" and "proper."

Not so Mr. Dann, the man who gave the first alarm. He told newspaper reporters he considered the raid might have been "nipped in the bud" if his tip to the police had been acted upon more promptly.

His story is that he saw what he thought was a dark-skinned man enter the bank at about 1.15 p.m. But when two others followed him with "something over their heads," he was pretty certain a hold-up was in progress.

He rushed into the barber shop, outside which he had parked his car, and asked for a telephone. There wasn't any.

"So I ran across the street to get a phone at a store. Then I saw a constable standing in the police station door."

Mr. Dann said he yelled to the officer.

"I said I was sure there was an attempt being made to rob the bank a little distance up the street," he said.

Within a minute.

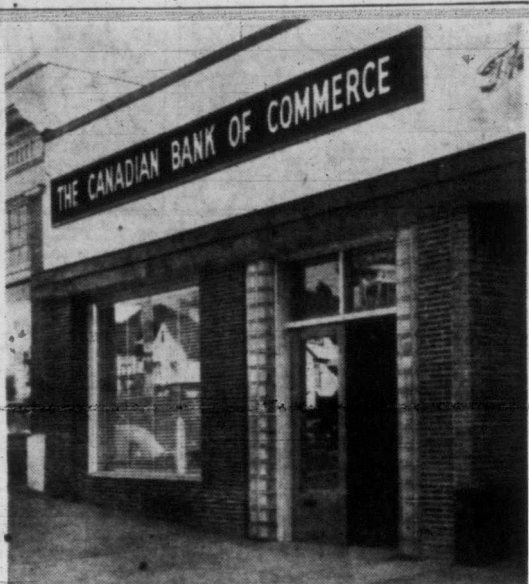

This, he thought, was within a minute of seeing the bandits enter the bank.

"I ran back towards the bank expecting the police would be right on my heels."

The get-away car was still at the curb.

He ran back to the police station. He thought the officer was talking on the phone.

By the time he got back to the street a prowler car had arrived and the bandits had fled.

Plundered Bank in Busy Area

POLICE GRILL SUSPECT

he took the license number of the car, U4-435, and within seconds realized that a hold-up had taken place at the bank.

He gave chase in his own car, but failed to find a trace of the men. The hold-up took the businessmen and shoppers in the little business section, just a stone's throw from the police station, completely by surprise.

"I knew nothing about it until after it was all over," said Bill Oliver, proprietor of the Golden Galleon, next door to the bank. Police were warned by an Oak Bay resident, Fred Dann, of 2363 Cookman. An immediate alarm was made over the police radio.

Mrs. A. Fletcher, a nearby resident, was nearly knocked down by the bandit trio after the hold-up.

"I realized it must be a hold-up because they looked so funny," she told reporters.

Police suspect the getaway car is a late-model green Oldsmobile, property of L. C. Sewell, Vancouver, that was stolen Thursday night from in front of Crystal Court.

License number of the Sewell car, however, is S8-326, indicating plates may have been switched on the stolen car. Witnesses described the getaway car as either a Chevrolet or Oldsmobile, light green in color.

It appeared that the bandits had timed the operation of buses nearby, since the bus zone in front of the bank in which they parked was empty. No buses approached while they were in the bank, although they usually arrive every five minutes.

Residents at Central Avenue and St. Patrick Street had their curiosity aroused in the morning when three young men left their bus for a smoke at about 10 a.m., then boarded the bus only to get off near the Victoria Golf Club.

"They might have been young fellows looking for caddy jobs," one man reported. "On the other hand, they might have been looking the district over and perhaps timing the operations of the buses."

The vice-president and general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, James Stewart, CBE, just missed witnessing the hold-up by about 15 minutes.

Here on one of his periodic trips to visit bank branches, he and James Thow, manager of the main branch here, had just concluded a visit with Mr. Brown.

"Fortunately no one was hurt," was Mr. Stewart's only comment when he heard of the robbery.

It was originally believed only $2,000 was taken in the lightning-like robbery. A later check revealed, however, that a total of $3,600 was missing, including $2,000 in United States currency.

Among the American money were six $100 bills and five $50 bills. A warning has gone to business firms and others to watch for the somewhat unusual notes.

ASK The TIMES

Q.—Could you please advise me if there is a by-law in the city of Victoria prohibiting dogs to run at large and destroy unfenced property? D.W.

A.—In number one fire area or in any public park with the exception of that section of Beacon Hill Park, south of Dallas Road, dogs must be kept on a leash. In all other sections of the town dogs may run at large providing they are under charge of some responsible person, as in the accepted area of Beacon Hill Park. Otherwise the dogs may be impounded.

Q.—Who was the first combat photographer?

A.—An Englishman, Robert Fenton, photographed the Crimean War in 1855.

BETWEEN TIMES

By MONTE ROBERTS

Bill Knights, prominent Calgary Rotarian now visiting in Victoria, is in an almost constant state of being reminded of a story.

One of his favorites, which happens to be true, concerns the day when Bishop Calvert, Bishop of Calgary, was made a member of the Rotary Club.

The club member who sponsored the distinguished gentleman wound up his introduction to the club by saying: "Fellow Rotarians—I am honored to present my 'Lord Calvert.'"

Turned out the sponsor was the local representative for the beverage of the same name.

Bill isn't sure, but he thinks he heard the bishop murmur: "All I can supply is the chaser."

*This advertisement is not published or displayed by the Liquor Control Board or by the Government of British Columbia.

My underworld grapevine tells me the Canadian Bank of Commerce will soon hear from the enterprising gentlemen who made the unauthorized withdrawal of $2,000 from the Oak Bay branch yesterday.

The gentlemen, I am told, were somewhat miffed when they found out most of the money was in U.S. currency.

What with the cost of business equipment, such as Sten guns, and the general high cost of living, they feel they cannot afford to accept currency which is at a discount to the Canadian dollar.

It is understood they are going to demand a settlement from the bank—either a straight exchange for their U.S. dollars for Canadian money, or a cash settlement in the amount of the discount.

If you've ever had trouble convincing your friends a black eye was the result of an encounter with a door jam in a dark room, you will have a tear to shed for Albert Stone of the B.C. Electric.

He currently sports a shiner which is mellowing into an attractive yellow-green with purple background shades. Meanwhile, the bruises and swelling have almost disappeared from the right hand of Mrs. Albert Stone.

This intriguing combination of wounds, wifely and husbandly, has caused Mr. Stone to go to great lengths in the matter of explanation.

A piece of wood he was chopping, he says, flew up and hit him in the eye.

His wife, he says, was pruning a rose bush when a thorn pierced her hand, causing the swelling and discoloration.

That's what he says. And it is perfectly true. But what chance has he of convincing anyone?

Hurry, hurry. Only 51 days to get out the vote for PUNCH for Premier.

Relax... and Play!

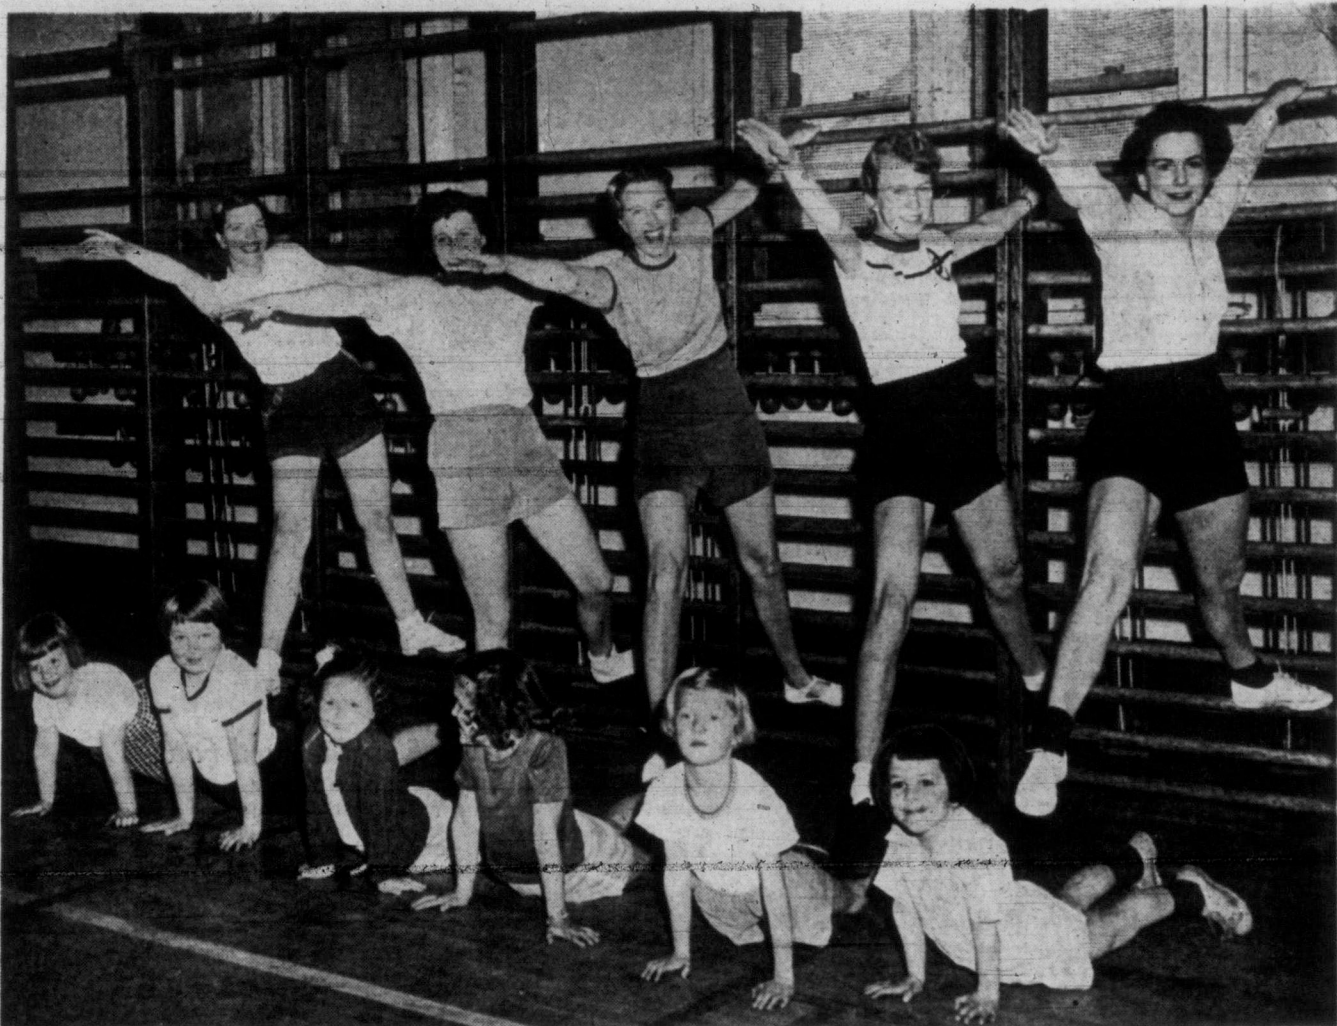

In Archie McKinnon's young matrons' class at the YMCA, more than 40 Victoria women are learning the value of proper exercise. Meeting twice a week from October to the end of May, these young women... and a few grandmothers... take gym exercises and swim in the "Y" pool. In holiday weeks they are joined by their young daughters and granddaughters in gay and happy hours designed for better living!

While most members of the class are in the young-matron age group, one or two grandmothers, who are physically fit, join in the exercises. Here, Mrs. E. Jenner, 71 years, takes an exercise with eight-year-old Sharon Fisk, designed to straighten backs and flatten stomachs. Mrs. Jenner has seven children and 19 grandchildren. Archie McKinnon, director of physical education at the YMCA, always advises prospective members to have a doctor's check-up before joining the class.

Extension stretching with hips off the floor and head back, the weight evenly dispersed on hands and heels, gives the class a "good stretch" in the words of Archie McKinnon. It relaxes the nerves, too, and when the chest is pushed forward and breathing is right, does much to give members of the class a better posture.

New Paper Sculpture
Craft for Youngsters

By PENNY SAVER

Paper sculpture is a new type of educational cut-out craft for children. Patterns contained in the sculpture kits are designed to develop artistic abilities in youngsters through curling, scoring and shaping the pieces of heavy paper. The completed sculptures measure about ten inches in height and have a life-like, three-dimensional look that children love. Assembled, the completed sculptures can be mounted on cardboard and used as room or party decorations. Teachers will find this a fascinating classroom project. Each kit contains materials for three animal heads and sells for 39 cents.

For brides, hostesses (and that could read, you, yourself), one of the nicest gift ideas is the chafing dish. There are some smart ones of attractive enamelware on wrought iron stands with bunsen-type burners that cost only $9.95 for a single dish and $17.95 for the double stand with two dishes. Also seen locally are lovely brass and copper chafing dishes, with a separate lining pan, that sell for $19.95 each.

Little boys will be delighted with grown-up-looking striped undershirts. In gaily-colored material, these shirts are trimmed with the white cotton knit that is ordinarily used for underwear, and thus assured of snug fit. In small, medium and large sizes for lads from six to 14 years at 59 cents a pair.

If you are planning a kitchen shower for some happy young lady, don't forget to include a recipe book. Favorite recipes are usually those we collect on our own, from friends, from clippings, especially from mother, and, of necessity, from mother-in-law! The book I have in mind is a lovely loose-leaf affair with a good selection of recipes included and lots and lots of empty pages for many, many years of happy collecting. Plenty of space for pasting in the delicious suggestions to be found in the Times' women's section and for writing down "helpful hints" we often publish. Costs just $1.98.

Spanking Won't Save
Baby-Sitter Problem

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, PhD

When a girl is old enough to act as a baby-sitter, she is much too old to be spanked. What sort of discipline could she maintain with children if they saw her spanked? The man who wrote the following letter is making a big mistake in his approach to a baby-sitting problem. He says:

(Q) "We have a baby-sitter who is very persistent in what she does. She is not just our baby-sitter but visits quite frequently in our home. I like her when she behaves herself, but at times she snoops around the house. She invites girl friends over and they start to fool around and break things. When I speak to her, she gets her temper up and calls me all sorts of names. She is 13 years of age, and believe me, if she were my daughter, I would have taken her across my knee long ago. I know if I spoke to her parents about her conduct, they would stop her from keeping the children altogether. Do you think a good sound spanking would solve the problem?"

(A) The only thing a good sound spanking would do, other than to relieve your own pent-up annoyance, would be to lose your baby-sitter. What makes you think she would ever set foot inside your home again? I can assure you that neither she nor her parents would be on speaking terms with you.

A girl of 13 is much too young to have the responsibility of staying alone in a house with children. She has certainly demonstrated this by her immature behavior. Everything she does when you are out of the house suggests that she is a child herself.

Instead of spanking this girl for acting her age, as she is doing, you would do better to spend your time looking for a suitable person with whom to leave your children. Don't try to get another young girl or you will run into similar problems to correct. It would be better to employ an older woman.

If you do not know anyone who does baby-sitting work, speak to your minister. There are generally, in every congregation, widows who supplement their incomes by going out as baby-sitters.

Dr. Hurlock is author of 12 books on psychology. Her advice in this column is free. Write her in care of this newspaper.

TURBULENT THEATRE

Growth of Nationhood
In Fine Arts Described

Canadianization of the fine arts and maelstrom of growth in which the Canadian theatre is involved were discussed Friday by Miss Dorothy Somerset, director of drama for Department of Extension, University of British Columbia, and of the new Frederic Wood Theatre on the campus. She was speaking at meeting of the Women's Canadian Club, her theme, "Canadian Theatre Scene in 1953."

"Canadian theatre is growing," she told her audience. "But it is not climbing steadily; it is in a state of turbulence and it often stumbles."

She said that development of art has come, as so often in history, with a rising tide of nationhood, but that we are still facing one of our frontiers, a pioneer life. It is only since the last war that national awareness and pride have developed on a large scale, the speaker stated.

Quoting Bruce Hutchison, Miss Somerset said we are all asking the question, "What does being a Canadian mean?" In the world of fine arts, we are gradually finding out, she said, through the eyes of the painter first, but now nationhood has touched music and literature as well. She regretted that there was not more encouragement for existing Canadian playwrights.

She described professional theatre across Canada, its successes and failures, referring particularly to Vancouver's Everyman group, which she said was one of the oldest professional companies in Canada, and to Victoria's York Theatre.

Three years ago, 90 per cent of theatre in this country was amateur, she pointed out, and without the amateur drama activity there would have been no theatre in Canada.

Professional and amateur theatre is now in rivalry, the amateurs feeling loss of audience and good actors to the pro field.

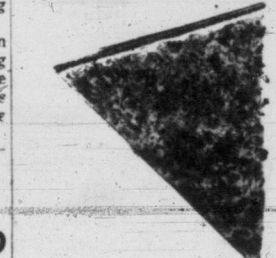

"However, if managed rightly they can exist side by side," she declared. "The effect has been a shot in the arm for amateurs. They must now look closely to see whether what they are doing is good enough."

Speaking of the Dominion Drama Festival finals, starting in Victoria, May 4, she said the list of plays to be presented was the most thrilling in the whole history of the DDF.

Vision and Learning

All of a child's ideas of the world and its life must come to him through his senses. If one of these senses is defective life ceases to be normal. A child must see correctly in order to understand. If he cannot see correctly, he cannot learn correctly. In short, poor vision affects his mental growth. He is clumsy where other children are skilled. He is slow where they are quick. He is worried and doubtful where they are serene and sure. He is shown all, yet finds himself at odds with everybody. He struggles to discover the cause but cannot. He may not complain about his eyes because he does not know about them. A child cannot know that his vision is wrong until that vision has been corrected.

All-White Flowers Decorate Church For Wingate-Cameron Wedding

A marriage was solemnized this afternoon at 3 o'clock, in St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, between Shirley Athalie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cameron, "Lochiel," 2021 Runnymede Avenue, and Donald Farmer Wingate, Los Angeles, son of Edwin Bryan Wingate, Tampa, Fla., and the late Mrs. Wingate.

Masses of pure white tulips, stocks and calla lilies were artistically arranged at the chancel rail and altar, under direction of Mrs. B. Russell Ker. Guest pews were marked with white blossoms tied with white satin ribbon and a touch of the Cameron tartan.

Archdeacon A. E. de L. Nunns performed the service. Wedding music was played by James Gerry, and eight young choir boys sang traditional hymns: "Lead Us Heavenly Father, Lead Us," "O Perfect Love" and "Love One Another."

Entering the church on the arm of her father, the fair-haired bride was an exquisite picture in a gown fashioned of multiple layers of nylon net over a satin crinoline. The tight fitting bodice emphasized her slender waist and the very full skirt which billowed into a slight train.

Filigree lace applied in a rose design outlined the boat neckline of the bodice and slim lily point sleeves extended over the wrists. A three-quarter length chapel veil, flaring from a crown of pearls and brilliants, was of the same tulle as the bride's gown and was worn over her face upon entering the church.

She wore a necklace of pearls and her favorite flowers, lily-of-the-valley, with white iris, formed the modified cascade bouquet.

TWO ATTENDANTS Mrs. Donald Crysdale, matron of honor, and Miss Gillian Trembley, bridesmaid, were gownned alike in enchanting hoop-skirted ballerina dresses of white nylon silk organdie, printed in an all-over design in the Chinese red and gold. The corded bodices had three-quarter push-up sleeves and boat necklines.

Pleated cummerbunds, white gloves and white silk organza sculptured caps with wing-draped sides and small mask veils completed the ensemble. Their flowers were arm sheafs of white tulips.

Henry Dimeling, Spokane, was best man, and Donald Cameron, brother of the bride, Jack Gatehouse and Donald Crysdale, ushers. In harmony with the perfection of simplicity that marked the bridal picture, the groom, best man and ushers, wore blue blazers with grey flannels.

A reception was held at "Lochiel" where white floral motifs of lilies, tulips and stocks was repeated in the adjoining conservatory, massed pink hydrangeas formed a lovely contrasting note.

Mrs. Cameron assisted the bridal pair in receiving the many guests. She wore a model gown of navy triple sheer. A navy taffeta cummerbund fell into a graceful looped bow lined with dusky pink tulle, over one hip, and her small close-fitting hat was fashioned of tiny iridescent shells, miniature roses and lilac florets, repeating the accent in the gown.

A bride's table, covered with a cloth composed of squares of fillet lace and embroidered linen, held a three-tier cake, topped with lily-of-the-valley and fern. Tall white candles in silver holders stood on either side. A toast to the bride was proposed by J. Villiers-Fisher and during the reception, Pipe-Major Andrew Pollock piped Highland airs in the garden.

Mr. and Mrs. Wingate will spend a few days honeymooning on Vancouver Island and then motor south to Los Angeles, where they will make their home. For traveling, Mrs. Wingate chose a Christian Dior model in fine navy wool, featuring a pleated cummerbund and bolero with nipped-up sleeves. Her shoes and purse were of navy blue leather, polka dotted in white, and she wore white gloves and a navy straw halo bonnet edged with navy velvet, tiny veil, and a corsage of lily-of-the-valley.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Strathcona Hotel, when the bride's mother, in a full-length gown of beige nylon and a small matching feather hat, and wearing a corsage of pink rosebuds, assisted the young couple in receiving guests. Bride's table was decorated with white tulips and centred with a three-tier wedding cake. Father Costelloe proposed a toast to the bride and groom.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Bouchard left on their honeymoon to Seattle. For traveling Mrs. Bouchard chose a red wool dress complemented by black accessories and topped with a short white coat. Her corsage was of white gardenias.

Malan Holds 26-Seat Edge In Assembly

PRETORIA, South Africa (UP)—White South Africans have given Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan a strong mandate to maintain white supremacy by means of strict racial segregation.

Under this mandate, given him in Wednesday's parliamentary election, Malan is expected also to move steadily toward the eventual declaration of a South African republic completely independent of the British Commonwealth.

Nearly complete returns from the election for a 159-seat, five-year-term house of assembly gave Malan's Nationalist party 87 seats, against 61 for the United-Labor party coalition.

Political experts predicted that the final result would be Nationalists 84, combined Opposition 65. This would give Malan a majority of 29 compared to the 13 he had in the old house.

United Party leader J. G. N. Strauss conceded victory to Malan at midnight Thursday, long after the result was apparent.

The jubilant Nationalists scheduled victory parades in Pretoria today. They had been so sure of victory that they plastered the city Wednesday night with posters announcing victory rallies.

Mexico Sales Predicted

EDMONTON (CP)—Canadian Prairie wheat shipped via Vancouver will be able to compete in Mexico with Argentine wheat within a year or two when Mexico's expansion of Pacific Coast port facilities will be completed, M. T. Stewart, Canadian commercial counselor at Mexico City, said Friday.

Mr. Stewart said Mexico also offers a widening market for Canadian purebred Hereford cattle and fresh eggs. Last year Canadian exports to Mexico, led by newsprint, were worth $40,000,000.

LAST HOLIDAY FOR MAUGHAM?

Second World War PWs in Europe Denied $1 a Day

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has turned down a request that all prisoners of war in the Second World War be given $1 a day for their period of captivity.

State Secretary Bradley today tabled in the Commons a letter written to the National Council of Prisoners of War making known this decision. He added that he also has turned down a request for a further cabinet audience by the council to plead its case.

The gist of the government's decision is that Canadians who were prisoners of the Japanese and of the notorious German S.S. and Gestapo did suffer hardships which entitle them to an automatic $1 a day compensation—already announced—but that men who were prisoners in ordinary German and Italian camps did not suffer such hardships.

Tots' Taps Terrifying

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP)—Two small children tapped playfully at the window of the Manitoba telephone building Friday—with sticks of dynamite.

A panic-stricken technician rushed out of the building and grabbed the explosive from the children, but forgot to get their names.

The town engineer said the sticks had been outside all winter, but disclaimed any knowledge of where they came from.

Germn Leader Wants Boards Selected Soon

OTTAWA (CP)—Konrad Adenauer is trying to talk the big Western powers into hastening the establishment of clemency boards which will try such war criminals as Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer, an official of the Adenauer party said here Friday night.

Talking to reporters after the West German chancellor arrived for a 22-hour visit, the official said the boards cannot be established for months under present arrangements because they must await the ratification of a contractual agreement with Germany by a number of national parliaments.

Officials here say the Canadian government has already decided to allow the tribunals to review the cases of Meyer and Johann Neitz, a sailor serving 21 years for shooting a Canadian prisoner. Meyer is serving life for responsibility for the shooting by men of his division of 18 Canadian prisoners.

Mechanical Iceman To Serve Citizens

Victorians will soon have a chance to be their own icemen.

B. Wilson Co. Ltd. is installing a mechanical ice-dispensing unit at its Herald Street warehouse, which will operate on an automatic basis.

The machinery is designed so that when a coin is dropped in an outside slot, gears will turn and out will pop the ice. Cakes of ice will be supplied through one door, and bags of chipped "party pack" ice, through another.

The unit is expected to go into operation in about a month's time.

CAN GUILTY PLEA BE REVERSED?

Crown Counsel Fears Confusion When Convicted Man Appeals

B.C. Court of Appeal reserved judgment Thursday after hearing Crown argument against dismissal by County Court judge of an impaired driving conviction registered in a police court.

The appeal court's decision in the case will be important since it will determine procedure to be followed by County Court judges when faced with appeals against summary convictions in which a plea of guilty has been entered.

At one time it was accepted practice that once a man had pleaded guilty to a charge in police court, he could not later change his mind and appeal at County Court level, entering a not-guilty plea there—except in certain circumstances.

A recent Saskatchewan Court of Appeal decision, however, has left the question of procedure in doubt. In the case before Appeal Court Thursday, it was shown a County Court judge in the West Kootenay district followed the Saskatchewan ruling, by allowing an appeal last February of Edwin J. Sanders, of Trail, who the month before in police court had pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving.

FINE REFUSED

Sanders, who was involved in a New Year's Eve accident in Trail, was fined $50, plus $4.50 costs in police court. The fine money was refunded after the County Court judge allowed his appeal and set aside the conviction.

Sanders' explanation for pleading guilty in police court was: "I thought if I had a drink and drove a car I was guilty. I did not consult a solicitor before pleading."

The appeal against the County Court decision was taken by the attorney-general's department, represented by H. Alan Maclean, Q.C.

Mr. Maclean, in presenting his case, said that if it became established that people could plead guilty to a charge in police court and then 29 days later change their minds and enter a not-guilty plea in County Court, police would have a difficult time presenting prosecution evidence.

He cited, as an example, what might happen if a motor accident occurred in Victoria between a local citizen and U.S. tourist, in which the local man was held to blame. The Americans would be told they would not be needed as witnesses if the person charged pleaded guilty in police court, he said. Twenty-nine days later, he said, these people might be needed as witnesses and might be in Florida or some other far-away place.

Court Considerate As Refugee Vandal Smashes Sculpture

LONDON (Reuters)—A Hungarian refugee who smashed a prize-winning sculpture entitled "The Unknown Political Prisoner" because he considered it "rubbish," today was placed on a year's probation.

The court described 28-year-old Laslo Szilvassey's act as "a bit of wicked, malicious, calculated hooliganism" which normally would rate a long prison term.

Rare Unanimity In UN for Peace On Korean Front

PW Exchange Starts
At 4 p.m. Sunday

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—In a rare unanimous vote, the UN General Assembly today expressed hope that the proposed talks at Panmunjom will result in an early armistice in Korea.

Friction on another controversial issue was avoided when the assembly decided to postpone action on a controversial measure calling for an impartial inquiry into Communist charges that the UN has used germ warfare in Korea.

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—The Communists said today they would be prepared Sunday to discuss a date for resuming Korean armistice talks which ended in a deadlock last Oct. 2.

Their announcement came shortly after homeward-bound Chinese war prisoners ended a 48-hour "hunger strike" at Panmunjom, the second demonstration by the hard-core Reds since Wednesday.

The Communists also proposed releasing the first group of 25 Allied prisoners at 9 a.m. Monday (4 p.m. PST Sunday), and another group of 25 half an hour later.

They said they wished to continue the release of prisoners in batches of 25. Allied staff officers said the timetable "appeared reasonable" but they wanted to study it.

Aug. 10 Likely Date For Federal Election

By VICTOR J. MACKIE, Times Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—August 10 is increasingly singled out by parliamentary circles here as the date on which the federal government will go to the country.

Members who favored an early spring election and were disappointed have now swung their weight to the August 10 date. They visualize the pre-election pattern taking the following shape:

June 11—Dissolution of parliament. June 22 commencement of enumeration of the voters' list, to be completed in six days as required by Election Act, August 10, voting day, October 10, return of the writs for the election consisting of official certification of the 265 members elected for the new parliament.

The government must be aware of the difficulties involved in completing a reasonably accurate enumeration of the voters for the voters' lists in either July or August, both holiday months. A delay of enumeration beyond July 1 or to put it off altogether until the fall, after Labor Day, would preclude the voting day being fixed much before Nov. 16. This date most members are agreed would be too late for a general election. Hence the growing conviction in the capital here that Aug. 10 will be the date for the federal ballot battle.

Announcement was made Friday afternoon by Norman Johnston, president of the Toronto club.

The competition is open to the 95 daily newspapers published in this country.

The Times entered seven of Hutchison's editorials, covering three main topics:

(1) The famous March 7 editorial, "Now, to Kill Hospital Insurance," which precipitated a B.C. legislature demand that the Times be called before the bar of the House to make a public apology. (The Times ran the editorial a second time to make sure that none of its readers missed the controversial piece.)

(2) An editorial of July 16, 1952, arguing that the Chief Justice should not be asked to intervene in labor disputes, on the grounds that "the courts are not to be involved in any fashion with the making of the law or its administration. They must only interpret the law."

(3) The front-page editorial of June 17, 1952, entitled "The Crisis and the Constitution," concerning the dispute arising out of last June's election and arguing: "Whatever happens to political parties and politicians, the Queen's writ must always run."

Police Release Pair When Identification Fails; Loot $3,600

Two men were paraded in an identification line-up by Oak Bay police today in their investigation of the daring daylight robbery of the Canadian Bank of Commerce branch bank in Oak Bay Friday afternoon.

Police Chief Hugh Reston said they were released when members of the bank staff failed to identify them as members of the trio which robbed the bank at gunpoint, and escaped with $3,600.

Police did not divulge the identity of the two men.

The two men were picked up by police in an overnight check of suspicious characters. They were not placed under arrest.

Latest development this afternoon was the information that license plates U-4435, which were on the get-away car, were recently stolen from Clarke's Auto Parts and Service Garage.

Meanwhile, despite the most extensive police dragnet ever laid down on southern Vancouver Island, the sedan which

Search Cordova Bay Area

The main search during the night was concentrated in the Cordova Bay and Gordon Head areas after Gavin Jack, who lives at the intersection of Blenkinsop and Marine Drive, reported seeing three men in bushes there at about 8:30 p.m.

Police of Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich, Esquimalt, and the RCMP joined forces to scour the area all through the night with no success.

Road blocks and patrols on the beach, designed to cover every method of escape, failed to turn up a sign of the three men.

Mr. Jack told police: "I was walking through the bush from my son's house when I saw three men in dungarees ahead of me. One of them had a bulge under one arm." Mr. Jack said.

"They moved out of the bush very fast and first turned toward Mount Douglas Park. Then they walked down Marine Drive and into the bush again."

Chief Constable John Blackstock and Deputy Chief Harry Mercer of the city force helped direct the search.

Constables on foot prowled every trail in the country and redoubled their efforts at first light today.

Hutchison's Times Editorials Given Top Award for Canada

Bruce Hutchison, editor of The Victoria Daily Times, has won the National Newspaper Award for the best Canadian editorials of 1952.

The honor, which has come to western Canada for the first time in the five-year history of the Toronto Men's Press Club awards, carries with it a $400 cash prize and a certificate.

Police Grill Hold-Up Suspect

Gunmen Get $3,600 In Daring Robbery Of Oak Bay Bank

License plates on the get-away car in the Oak Bay Bank hold-up Friday were stolen from Clarke's Auto Parts and Service garage at 3291 Douglas, police reported today. Owners of the garage said they did not know when the plates were stolen.

A man was being questioned by Oak Bay police today on suspicion he may have taken part in Friday's daylight armed hold-up of the Canadian Bank of Commerce branch in Oak Bay.

Police did not divulge his identity but said he was picked up in an overnight check of suspicious characters.

Meanwhile, despite the most extensive police dragnet ever laid down on southern Vancouver Island, the sedan which three armed men used for their getaway had apparently vanished into thin air.

It was either an Oldsmobile Rocket or a Chevrolet, according to eye-witnesses.

Loot taken by the men—one carrying a Sten gun the other two revolvers—was disclosed today as $3,600, not $2,000 as first reported. Most of it was in United States currency.

While the search was pressed all over the Island, Oak Bay police discounted reports that the bank robbers may have stolen a launch and fled to the United States.

The suspect taken in for questioning will be put in a line-up for possible identification by the three staff members of the bank who were forced to lie on the floor during the hold-up.

He is not under arrest.

On June 2, Hutchison will cover the Coronation exclusively for the Times.

In a letter to the Times staff received yesterday, from the French Riviera, Hutchison wrote:

"In this lotus land of flowers and decadence nothing seems to matter but the next meal, which will be wonderful, expensive and inadequate. As to wine, we use it to clear the windshield, and I am drinking Wicky water to keep my stomach in order. Well, I must take some pictures of this indescribable beauty, which is almost as good as Victoria. Love to you all. I am most eager for our reunion on the good old paper."

The Political Pot

An advance poll for the June 9 election will be held in Victoria June 4, 5 and 6. Persons who will be unable to vote on election day can make use of advance poll facilities which are expected to be situated, as usual, in the YMCA.

Women have a difficult time in B.C. politics. Of 53 who have tried to get elected since 1918, only seven have been successful.

Here's a warning to potential candidates: Your name must be on the voters' list. Under the Elections Act, a person is entitled to be nominated only if he is a qualified voter.

This regulation disqualified one candidate last year.

With politics so much in the news since the 1952 election, observers are looking for an upswing in voting June 9.

Last year, 68.53 per cent of the persons eligible to vote went to the polls—543,456 out of 793,073 eligible.

Every effort will be made to see that B.C.N. sailors on training cruises near B.C. are given a chance to vote.

Last year, election officials arranged for ships to rendezvous at a designated spot so election machinery could be put aboard.

Premier Bennett will meet this afternoon with B.C. Social Credit League executive members to discuss election strategy.

Just back from the interior, the premier is optimistic about his party's chances in the June 9 election.

"People appreciate what we did during our eight months in office. They want to give us a chance to see what we can do in a full term. Also, they know the Socialists are the only ones with a chance to form a government with a majority," Premier Bennett said.

Frank Calder, 27-year-old native Indian who has been a member of the last two legislatures, will be out to retain his Atlin seat. He received CCF nomination for the district Friday. Also nominated to run again was George Hills, CCF, Prince Rupert.

Married Men in Armed Forces Get Pay Boost

OTTAWA (CP)—The 48,000 married men in Canada's armed forces will get bigger subsistence or ration allowances, effective May 1.

Some 33,000 married men living off-station will get increased subsistence allowances ranging from $16 to $30 a month. The remaining 15,000 living on-station will get a $10-a-month increase in ration allowance.

Defense Minister Claxton, after announcing the boosts in the Commons Friday night, told a reporter the increase will cost the government about $10,000,000.

The new subsistence allowance for other ranks who are married will be $91 a month, an increase of $30 a month for privates and corporals in the army or their equivalents in the navy and RCAF, $19 a month for sergeants and $10 a month for staff sergeants and warrant officers.

BASIC MINIMUM

Basic minimum rate for officers—except second lieutenants who will get the basic $91 rate for other ranks—will be $110 a month. This will increase the allowance for married second lieutenants by $26 a month, lieutenants $21 and captains $16. The increases do not apply above the rank of captain.

The ration allowance, paid married men supplied with married quarters by the services, will be increased by $10 to $30.
